Two Financial Items Cardozo, Excellent Choice Digging in to Die John D.'s Philosophy

—By Arthur Brisbane—

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16—In a fight for control of the Transamerica Corp., lineal descendant of the Bank of Italy, A. P. Giannini, who created the bank, won an overwhelming victory with more than 15,000,000 votes out of 24,000,000 cast. That interests East and West.

Another financial item. Thomas Fortune Ryan's property, left behind when he died in 1928, amounts to "only" $135,000,000. He used to say when alive, "The income tax has cut my fortune in two."

It is probable that 1929 cut it still more, since few escaped that slash.

A man of great energy was Thomas Fortune Ryan, knowing how to get control of properties and make them profitable for himself. The late J. P. Morgan said, "Ryan can be the richest man in the world if he wants to."

Mr. Ryan bought diamond mines in South Africa, brought the diamonds out by airplane, which disappointed would-be robbers, and knew how to pick good men for his work.

The possibility, suggested here, when Justice Holmes resigned that Judge Benjamin N. Cardozo might be chosen to succeed Justice Holmes, became reality yesterday when Judge Cardozo was appointed by the President.

He is a man of highest character, profound knowledge of law. His appointment will be approved universally, and the fact that he is of Jewish birth, the second of his race to be appointed to the Supreme Bench, interests many energetic Americans.

Japan continues sending more guns, men, airplanes, fighting ships, while an Associated Press dispatch from Shanghai tells how the Chinese pathetically "dig in to die." That sounds like the resignation of a race growing old. A younger race would "dig in" to make the Japanese sorry they ever came.

You don't know much about individuals or nations until you have seen them losing.

It is possible to be an excellent winner, following up advantages vigorously, and a poor loser, discouraged by defeat.

The Japanese since they became westernized or what we call "civilized" have not known defeat. They beat China with ridiculous ease, beat Russia, and are still bitter because Theodore Roosevelt as umpire did not give them all they had hoped for from Russia.

How will the Japanese take defeat? That remains to be seen, but there is every reason to suppose that they will take it calmly, as they have taken victory hitherto. Much depth to the Japanese character, and, as time goes in Asia, that race is young.

John D. Rockefeller, in good health again, tells reporters that follow him to church "you can say again—I am happy to be alive."

That is the statement of a philosopher. All that we get from this existence is "being alive."

Mr. Rockefeller is happier now than when giving hundreds of millions to education and science before he transferred the heavy load of his enterprises to the shoulders of his son.

Uncle Sam expects this week to "release" $750,000,000 "to help restore prosperity." If that money were distributed among families of six millions idle, the distribution would be called "Socialism paternalism" and that terrible thing a DOLE.

But, the money is going to banks and corporations, so it is not a dole, it is "intelligent financing."

You cannot, in the opinion of the best judges, distribute money with safety to individuals idle. They might get the habit of idleness and like it. And distributing money to corporations that employ labor, means giving work to those that need it, if the money is well used.

In any case, that is the kind of government we have, a government BY organized money and largely FOR organized money.

Russia is trying to do the other thing, and this country is wishing her all possible bad luck.

If Russia should succeed and we, temporarily, should fail, that would be another story.

For a change, here is something to please the prohibitionist, tired of bootleg, speakeasy, and bribery narrations.

Mr. "Vic" Meyer, leader of a jazz orchestra, who wants to be mayor of Seattle, and relies on beer to help him, rode in his political parade on an old-fashioned beer wagon, drawn by four horses, loaded with empty kegs. The would-be mayor rode on the kegs. A wheel came off, the mayor fell out, the kegs on top of him, no serious damage done, but it did seem like a special Providence.

20 SEIZED IN PLOT ON PONTIFF'S LIFE

Police Unearth More Infernal Machines in Worker's Home at Villa in Gandolfo

Rome, Feb. 16 (INS)—Italian police today discovered a bomb in the Castel Gandolfo, the Papal villa 18 miles from Rome, which Pope Pius XI plans to visit in the near future when he makes his long-awaited exit from the Vatican.

Twenty workmen engaged in rebuilding the villa in preparation for the Pope's visit were arrested. Their homes were searched, and in one of them were found several infernal machines.

The arrests were made as a result of information received by Italian police that several suspected Communist agitators were among the workmen.

The Castel Gandolfo, a historic structure, has long been Vatican property. It has not been used in almost 70 years by any Pontiff, as up until three years ago, when the Lateran treaties between church and state were signed, the popes remained in the Vatican as voluntary prisoners.

Pope Pius has long been expected to celebrate his "liberation" from the Vatican by journeying to Gandolfo for a brief vacation.

He has made one or two brief trips outside the confines of the Vatican since the signing of the treaties, but they have always been carried out with utmost secrecy.

Police and Vatican authorities are co-operating in an exhaustive investigation into the mysterious placing of the bomb in St. Peter's, possibly at the time Premier Mussolini appeared there after his visit to the Pope or before the Pontiff said his 10th anniversary mass last week.

The bomb was removed Saturday after authorities were informed of it through a mysterious cablegram from the United States.

Pope Thanked by Duce's Daughter for His Prayers

Vatican City, Feb. 16 (AP)—During their talk Thursday, it was learned today Pope Pius told Mussolini he had been praying for the premier's daughter, Edda, and her husband, Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian consul general at Shanghai.

The premier thanked him and informed his daughter of the incident. Today the Pontiff received a cablegram from the couple in China thanking him for his prayer.

Warship Saves 9 on Crippled Plane

Rome, Feb. 16 (AP)—Seven passengers and two pilots were rescued from a twin-motored Italian seaplane 50 miles off Malta today by the British destroyer Brilliant.

Both the plane and its occupants were taken to Malta by the destroyer, which had been called by wireless. The seaplane had alighted in the ocean to repair a motor and was unable to take off because of the heavy sea.

DEATH COMES TO MRS. FISKE

New York, Feb. 16 (INS)—Mrs. Minnie Maddern Kiske, one of America's most noted actresses, died yesterday afternoon on Long Island, it was announced today in the home of her husband, Harrison Grey Fiske.

She had been ill for three months.

The veteran actress died in Hollis, Queens in the home of a friend. Heart disease was given as the immediate cause of her death. A bloodclot formed on her heart after she had been under treatment for a long period for auto-intoxication.

The body was brought here for cremation.

Mrs. Fiske's husband said the actress had been given him specific instructions as to her funeral.

"There will be no public funeral," he said. "Mrs. Fiske's instructions willl be followed to the letter."

Fiske said his wife was thought by friends to have shown considerable improvement in health recently and her death came as a shock and a surprise.

Revere Firemen Save 'Canned Cat' From Death in Creek

The lassooing training of Revere policemen being not of the Class AA variety, Revere firemen rescued a "canned" cat today from the thin ice skimming Snake Creek between Chelsea and Revere.

While some of the boys overseas may have hinted that their canned "monkey meat" was canned cat or something worse, this cat merely had its head in an empty can and couldn't get out.

In fact, there were two cats with their heads in cans when Motorcycle Officers Leon Ridlon and Al Seavey answered the first alarm: but in the interim between their unsuccessful attempts to lassoo the cats and then seeking aid Ladder 2 firemen, one of the felines released his head and scampered away.

Ladderman Charles E. Gilooley went out over a ladder spread across the ice and rescued the remaining cat, the can being removed at the station.

Strange Drug Killed Brookline Girl

ETHER FOUND NEAR HOAX VICTIM

Narcotic Traced to Berlin; 4 Nations Join Inquiry; Mystery May Be Solved Tomorrow

Drugs were found today in the body of Elizabeth Barrett Cook.

A report from Gibraltar, where the mystery of the beautiful young Brookline girl's death while en voyage from Naples to Boston is under investigation, disclosed that a powerful narcotic of German manufacture was shown by a chemical analysis of her organs.

The same dispatch revealed that a quantity of concentrated ether was found near her body in her cabin on the liner, Chinese Prince, shortly before the ship docked at Gibraltar on February 7.

TRACE DRUG IN BERLIN

A small bottle containing tablets of the narcotic, and bearing the label of a Berlin chemist, was near the ether in the cabin.

British authorities have cabled from Gibraltar to Berlin in an attempt to trace the purchaser of the drug.

The finding of the drug is believed to indicate that Miss Cook died from an administration of the narcotic, but how she died and what connection her death had with the presence in her handbag of the hoax message announcing the death of her Boston fiance, St. George T. Arnold, remained as great a mystery as ever.

Arnold said he never knew Miss Cook to use drugs in any form. He believes the tablets found may have been a sleeping potion and that, by accident, she may have taken an overdose.

Advices from Gibraltar made known for the first time the tragic drama attending efforts to save Miss Cook's life after she had been found dying in her cabin.

COOK CALLED BY JURY IN BANK PROBE

Grand Jury Orders Secretary of State to Produce Files in Inquiry Into Crash

Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook was ordered today by the Suffolk County grand jury to bring before it corporation papers on file in his office and which have an alleged connection with the Industrial Bank & Trust Co. investigation.

Appearance at the State House of Police Inspector Martin Conroy with a grand jury summons caused a stir. In view of declaration by Asst. Dist.-Atty. John J. Murphy that was "going through" with the probe, regardless of what officials it hit.

The excitement subsided somewhat, however, when it was learned that all that was wanted this time were records of the Susquehanna Public Utilities Co. and Standard Shares, with both of which the Industrial is reported to have had some transactions.

Murphy charges that the affairs of the Industrial were the "rottenest mess" he had ever seen and that conditions never could have existed if state officials had done their sworn duty. He said he had been hampered in obtaining certain records.

He interrupted the testimony of Miss Marion Pike, a secretary in the office of Eaton & McKnight, to have the summons issued for the secretary of state's files. Stock in the closed bank owned by this firm is said to have been held in the name of Miss Pike and Miss Vera Stanton, another employe.

Waiting to go before the jurors at the time was Frederick D. Bonner, legal adviser to Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy.

EMPTY AUTO IN WILD PLUNGE

Nelson Mottola of 100 Bayswater st., East Boston, went for a ride today with his big sedan—but not the way he expected.

When the ride was over, Mottola had a badly scratched face and head, eight feet of telegraph pole were missing at the top, a guy wire to the pole was snapped and Mottola's car was resting at the water's edge on the beach.

Mottola failed to pull the handbrake up far enough after he backed his car out of the garage and went to close the garage doors. The sedan rolled across the street and plunged over the embankment down to the beach, snapping the telephon guy-wire on the way.

Mottola's efforts to halt the car by clinging to the rear were futile, and when the wire snapped, the jagged ends whipped across his face and head.

Promised Snowfall Off Till Tomorrow

Slightly postponed, the promised snow is now scheduled for some time Wednesday—only it may be rain instead. At any event there will be a northeast wind, according to the weather sharps, and meantime the mercury will climb slowly.

It got down to 11 degrees at 6 o'clock this morning, which was officially the coldest of the whole night.

The temperature was zero this morning in Bedford, 4 above at Lexington and 5 at Concord. This is the first winter Concord has not had zero temperature. Workmen are cutting seven-inch ice in that vicinity.

TROOPS GUARD IRISH POLLS

Dublin, Irish Free State, Feb. 16 (AP)—Civil guards reinforced troops for a heavy turnout of voters, who will decide today whether they will return President William T. Cosgrave to power or put in his stead the stormy Eamon De Valera and his Fianna Fail.

Tension at the polls was intensified on account of two assassinations and an attempted murder on the closing days of the campaign. Two government supporters were slain while delivering political addresses, and a government candidate was fired on.

The presence of guards and troops was intended as insurance against intimidation and no further trouble was anticipated, authorities said.

The bitterness of the closing days of the campaign and fine weather brought large crowds to the polls beginning at 9 a. m., and a bigger vote than the 70 per cent of registration at the last election was indicated.

Cosgrave forces had the advantage of a well-organized transport system to take voters to polling booths. De Valera issued a last-minute statement denying reports spread yesterday that, if brought to power, he would abolish the Irish Hospital sweepstakes.

VON WIEGAND FINDS CHINESE READY FOR "BIG PUSH"

BARRICADES ON SECOND LINE VERY STRONG

Troops Withdrawn, While Jap Shells Fall Harmlessly in "No Man's Land"

Karl H. Von Wiegand, noted World War correspondent, is now in Shanghai covering the Sino-Japanese conflict for Universal Service. His latest exclusive dispatch to the Boston Evening American follows:

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND

Universal Service Special Cable

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc

Shanghai, Feb. 16—The major "Battle of Shanghai" will take place, when the Japanese forces of close to 40,000 men are ready, along the second defenses of the Chinese 19th Route Army.

Karl H. Von Wiegand

The Chinese troops—a Cantonese army of tried and experienced soldiers—have already withdrawn to their second line of heavy, almost impenetrable barricades leaving well-concealed machine-gun nests in the no man's land the Japanese have been bombarding for two weeks in the belief their shells were blasting the Chinese front lines.

CHINESE PREPARED

Gen. Tsai Ting-Kai, commander of the Chinese, told me today his men all along the front from Chapei through Kiangwan to Woosung would resist any Japanese advance. Appearances indicate that the main resistance will be not at Chapei, but further west and north.

A tour of the Chinese lines revealed that the area of a half-mile east of the Chunshan road in Chapei, a week ago filled with Chinese troops, gun emplacements and patrols, is now practically deserted.

Only occasional soldiers are seen in the roads which formerly were the main lines of communication with the north station. The roads are now blocked by fantastic barbed-wire twisting around telephone poles, supported across the roads by beds, tables and chairs taken from deserted houses. The elaborate barricades are apparently impenetrable.

TROOPS CONCEALED

The camouflaged frontline of the Chinese is there, but the real front is the second-defense line, where scores of soldiers man each redoubt. The troops are well-concealed, and westward toward Chenju, they are digging other defense lines commanding wide fields of fire.

The Japanese artillery batteries in Hongkew park are shelling the Chapei sector using tracer shells with the object of ferreting out the Chinese guns in their new positions. Foreign observers regard this as a prelude to a bombardment by siege guns.

A visit to the Woosung forts shows that their interiors are badly battered as the result of the Japanese aerial and naval bombardment, but the Chinese troops are still there. They have artillery pieces on hand to combat the Japanese shellfire and to lay a barrage for the defenders along Woosung creek.

Capt. Mayer, assistant American military attache, was at headquarters when I visited Gen. Tsai. The Chinese were nervous over the eight additional troopships which landed soldiers on Chinese territory Monday.

Asked what were his prospects for a further stand against the Japanese, Col. Tung of Gen. Tsai's staff declared:

"Of course, the Japanese are far better equipped than we, but our morale is better."

Shanghai Troops Given $50,000

Shanghai, Feb. 16 (AP)—The Chinese bankers' association presented the 19th Route Army, which is defending the city, 250,000 Mexican dollars, about $1 to each of the 50,000 men in the army, as an expression of "gratitude and good will," the bankers said.

The peace preservation committee also launched a campaign for "a national salvation fund for armed resistance to Japan's invasion of Chinese territory," its representatives said.

BOTH ARMIES MASSING FOR BIG BATTLE

all of Japan's previous important moves, and the coming gigantic attempt to drive the Chinese 20 or 30 miles from Shanghai was expected to be no exception.

MORE JAPS COMING

Chinese forces are estimated at between 30,000 and 50,000, while the Japanese numbers are estimated variously from 18,000, the official figure given out, to 25,000. Reports from Tokio today stated 10,000 more troops probably would be sent on their way soon.

The reason for the Japanese delay has been given as the desire to be fully prepared before attacking, the Japanese being well aware of their failure to take Chapei through too little preparedness and an underestimation of the Chinese strength.

This time there will be no such excuse. Yesterday and today both large and small tanks lumbered their way northward from Shanghai after being lowered from transport ships. Also landed were hundreds of cavalry horses, heavy and light field guns, provisions, and, of course, more men.

CHINESE READY

The Chinese also have been getting ready for the battle, obviously prepared for the "battle to the death" which leaders have been urging. With morale high, Chinese have been busy erecting barricades, digging trenches, laying barbed wire and planting well-hidden machine-gun nests where they best will mow down approaching Japanese forces.

The Chapei front was comparatively quiet today. Aside from the bomb explosions in Chapei, which were so loud that they gave creditable substantiation to reports the Japanese were using a new secret bomb of record size, there was little fighting in the immediate vicinity of Shanghai.

No noise was heard from the north, indicating that the Woosung front also was quiet.

PEACE EFFORTS FAIL

Efforts at effecting peace continued to fail. Both Chinese and Japanse leaders remained firm in refusing to accede to even the less drastic of the other's demands, and the intervention of foreign diplomats was fruitless.

American Minister Nelson T. Johnson, preparing to return to Nanking today, said he would continue to keep in touch with local and foreign officials in Shanghai in peace moves.

A retreat of the Chinese forces defending Shanghai because of lack of munitions was predicted today by a semi-official Chinese government spokesman as the probably eventual outcome of the massed Japanese attack, if and when it comes.

The retreat before the superior Japanese armament in the event of an offensive is almost inevitable, he said, but he added that it would be a retreat without defeat.

China has millions of men, he said, enough money to keep the army fed and for the first time in many wars she also has the necessary morale, but she has not the facilities necesary to keep her guns supplied with sufficient ammunition.

AMMUNITION SHORT

Chinese soldiers now have orders to use ammunition only when it is certain to be effective, he said, and he expressed the opinion any attempt by the small Chinese air force to engage in battle with Japan's air armada would be "suicide."

A Japanese offensive, however, he said, would strengthen rather than weaken the Chinese morale, for it would serve to sharpen the weapon with which the Chinese expect to gain their ultimate victory—the boycott of Japanese goods.

The 19th route army is determined to yield no inch of Chinese soil without a fight, however, and the defensive works which they have constructed will make no Japanese advance possible without a terrific toll of Japanese lives, military observers believe.

The Japanese can drive us only so far, a Chinese official said, "and the farther they drive us the harder their task will become.

Marines Honor Dead Comrade

Shanghai, Feb. 16 (US)—An American bugler blew taps today over the flag draped coffin of the first United States marine to die in Shanghai. He is Julius Merz, of Los Angeles, who died when his pistol was accidentally discharged.

All the marines who could be spared were present, lined up on board the U. S. S. Grant at rigid attention during the reading of services by Chaplain R. W. Truitt. The body will be shipped to Los Angeles.

JUST GUARDING YANKEE INTERESTS

It is estimated that United States forces in and about Shanghai number about 3000. In the International Settlement, sailors, marines and soldiers, as well as civilian volunteers, are at hand to protect American citizens and interests. This photograph was made several weeks ago, but before real action was reported from the Shanghai territory. The sailors are guarding in the International territory during student riots. JAPANESE FACE SUPREME TEST OF EFFICIENCY

Washington Experts See Possible Exposure of Military "Bogey Man" at Shanghai

Washington, Feb. 16 (INS)—Military experts in the United States today were watching with unusual interest the developments of Japan's organized offensive in Chinese territory, as a test of the vaunted efficiency of the Japanese army.

The success or failure of this drive will determine, in the opinion of these experts, whether the world has stood in awe for the past 20 years of a bogey man or the real fighting force which the army of the Rising Sun flag has been conceded.

The experts consider that Japan's military prowess has suffered a serious setback as a result of the reverses her forces have met at Shanghai.

DECISION IN DAY OR TWO

Until the Nipponese navy attempted to crack the Chinese nut extending from the Woosung forts to the rear of Shanghai there had been no question in military minds that the Japanese fighting forces of today were worthy successors of those that defeated the Russians at Port Arthur 25 years ago.

Today there was a large interrogation mark after that consideration. Japan now has a large army in the field at Shanghai, equipped with all the modern implements of warfare. This army is confronted by a Chinese force which is probably superior in numbers, but vastly inferior in equipment.

The test will come, military observers here believe, within the next 48 hours. If the present Japanese force fails to make decisive headway against the Chinese, Japan's arms will have suffered a humiliation in world opinion which no subsequent victory can completely erase.

NEAR BEING "OUTLAWED."

Whether Japan wins or loses this battle, she eventually must face a large diplomatic bill piling up against her in other capitals of the world.

Protest after protest has been filed with the Tokio foreign office by the other major powers against Japanese activities in China, until Japan today comes perilously near to being considered an outlaw nation.

It is a record such as no world power has had to face since the German delegates marched into the Versailles peace palace.

LEAGUE 12 VOTE TO WARN JAPS

BY FREDERICK K. ABBOTT

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Geneva, Feb. 16 (INS)—The League of Nations council of 12, meeting secretly today without representatives of either China or Japan, drew up a telegram couched in unusually strong terms of protest for dispatch to Tokio. The appeal asks Japan to stop fighting at once and declares the league will refuse to recognize any territorial changes resulting from Japan's occupation of China.

A second meeting was called for this afternoon at which the message was to be read to delegates of both China and Japan before sending it to the Japanese government.

The council met for an hour to consider the troublesome Shanghai conflict. It was expected W. W. Yen, Chinese delegate to the league, who asked convocation of the league assembly to consider the Sino-Japanese controversy, would withhold future action pending developments of this latest league move.

Yen has announced that if the league declines to convoke the assembly China will do it.

Jap Artillery Works Like Fine Machine

By JOHN GOETTE.

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Shanghai, Feb. 16 (INS)—For an hour today I stood on the Japanese lines and watched Japanese artillery of the 24th Brigade, commanded by Gen. Shimonoto, drop high explosive shells into the beleagured Woosung forts area.

The marksmen were as methodical and effective as a well oiled triple expansion engine.

Gen. Shimomoto assigned Capt. Kita to show me his troops in action. I stood beside an artilleryman who yanked a lanyard with machine like precision and sent shell after shell from a "75" into the Chinese lines a mile away.

EACH HIT MARKED

A cotton-ball of smoke rose with each hit, followed immediately by a searing reply from Chinese machine gunners. It was like throwing stones at a hornet's nest.

After this ordeal by fire I lined up with the Japanese doughboys for mess. They had rice and "slum" the piece de resistance of the American doughboy and sake or light wine which is rationed them daily.

Our meal was interrupted by six Japanese privates dragging into camp a number of Chinese soldiers who had been wounded and unable to escape during the skirmish our shells had stirred up.

CARE FOR PRISONERS.

One of the prisoners, a lad of about 16, had been shot through the leg. Capt. Kita promised me he would have immediate medical attention and explained that previous to my arrival his men had taken about a dozen other Chinese prisoners, who required treatment.

Capt. Kita declared that there were no Japanese troops across Woosung creek, where the area is one vast swamp. He said the Chinese were still holding tenaciously to the fort and working their guns intermittently.

A Japanese patrol came in and reported to Capt. Kita that the Chinese were hastily digging trenches on the other side of the creek.

SEES CHINESE WITHDRAWAL.

"I believe those trenches are intended to cover a Chinese withdrawal from the fort defenses," Capt. Kita said to me.

"Our planes report fewer Chinese over there during the last 24 hours. We have had no casualties during that period."

Returning to Shanghai I passed a Japanese airfield with a dozen or more scout planes and bombers being overhauled. Four bombers were already loaded each with six bambs and the engine of each plane was turning over rhythmically. In a few moments they took off to rain death on the Chinese position in the Chapei district.

JAPAN TO SEND FRESH ARMY OF 45,000

U. S. and Britain Told They "Would Do Same" in Shanghai Crisis

By JAMES R. YOUNG

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Tokio, Feb. 16—An intimation that Japan may send reinforcements to Shanghai totalling 45,000 men was given by Minister of War Sadao Araki today.

On the heels of new protests by Great Britain and the United States over landing of Japanese troops in the International Settlement, and with the League of Nations preparing a new, vigorously-worded cablegram, Araki outlined the government's plans, insisting that its only object is to protect the lives and property of Japanese nationals in Shanghai.

"The next 24 hours will determine our action," Araki said.

"Our policy will be to send adequate strength quickly when needed, and withdraw when that necessity is removed.

"Our militarists are well prepared for any eventuality."

"The Chinese show no indications of complying with Gen. Uyeda's ultimatum to withdraw a suitable distance from Shanghai.

"Meantime, the Chinese central national army is mobilizing rapidly."

The War Ministry is extremely pessimistic over the situation, pointing out the determined resistance put up by the Chinese at Woosung as well as repeated rumors that airplanes have been sent to Shanghai from Canton as proof that the Chinese are planning to fight rather than arbitrate.

Foreign military attaches here predict that if the Japanese dislodge the Chinese at Woosung the retreating forces will rush the International Settlement, involving other foreign troops and compeling the other powers to join the Japanese to clean up the situation.

"U. S. WOULD DO LIKEWISE"

In answering the protests delivered by British and American diplomats, Araki said Japanese troops had been landed in the settlement simply because no facilities were available outside the settlement for debarkation of large expeditionary forces.

He added that Great Britain and the United States would have acted similarly under similar circumstances.

Patriotism and war spirit among the populace of Japan have given this country a brand new fleet of war planes, the army office announced today.

Ten fighting planes have been donated by civilian contributors, it was announced. The planes are being used as the nucleus for a new air corps.

U. S., British Flags Used by Chinese to Escape Attack

Shanghai, Feb. 16 (AP)—Foreign flags, especially American, sprang up everywhere today, flying from flagpoles over buildings, in courtyards, over doorways and from most automobiles, trucks, carriages and even rickshas. Small boats plying along the waterfront also carried British or American flags.

Of 48 vehicles investigated, on which either American or British flags were flying, not one was found to be owned by a national of either country. The investigation was made after a complaint was made by the Japanese that the flags were being misused.

Examination by municipal police revealed that Chinese were the principal offenders. Even Red Cross flags were being flown on Chinese commercial vehicles.

Chinese flags were conspicuous by their absence.

Mellon May Re-Marry His Long Divorced Wife

STAR ASSERTS SHE WON'T REWED

Schenck Admits His Devotion to Business Caused Rift

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Hollywood, Feb. 16—Within the next 10 days Norma Talmadge, screen star, will sail for Paris to start divorce proceedings against Joseph Schenck, her producer husband.

Miss Talmadge, now in New York, said over the telephone:

"There is no other man and I have no intention of re-marrying. I still consider Mr. Schenck my best friend and I shall always have a great affection and esteem for him. If I needed a friend tomorrow, he would be the first one to whom I should appeal. We still have many business interests in common, mutual real estate both in New York and Los Angeles."

SEPARATED 5 YEARS

Miss Talmadge's statement that she does not expect to re-marry kills the current rumor that she will marry Gilbert Roland.

Mr. Schenck, who returned home with Paul Block in the latter's private car, corroborated his wife's statement that they would be divorced.

"If her freedom will make Norma happy, I want her to have it," said Mr. Schenck. "We have been separated for five years. We were married October 22, 1916, and the first nine years of our married life were very happy. Our business interests were the same and we were seldom separated.

BUSINESS CAUSE OF RIFT

"Then," said Mr. Schenck, "I made the mistake of leaving my wife alone too often. I became president of United Artists and business took me to New York.

JOSEPH SCHENCK

Norma could not go out alone and she became unhappy and lonely. Business caused the rift and not Norma's interest in any man."

2 JAIL GUARDS HURT IN CRASH

Providence, R. I., Feb. 16 (INS)—Two guards in the State prison at Cranston were seriously injured today when their roadster, in which they were returning to the prison, sideswiped a parked automobile and crashed into a telegraph pole.

The guards, taken to St. Joseph's hospital in Providence, were John T. Isaacson and James J. Wall. Names of bothe wereplaced on the danger list.

The men were discovered by Frederick Lynch of Cranston, owner of the parked automobile. He had telephoned a garage for a repairman to fix trouble with his car, and when he returned he saw the two men in the wreckage of their automobile.

Lynch telephoned police and, when they arrived, one of the guards was staggering about with a revolver in his hand. Both men were taken to Cranston police station, where their identity was established.

YOUNG WRIGLEY TAKES HOLD

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP)—A young man who never had time to "play around" has come home to take over the reins of one of the largest fortunes in the country.

He is Philip K. Wrigley, who, at 37 or thereabouts, recently became custodian not only of the chewing gum indusrty built up by his father, the late William Wrigley, Jr., but of two baseball teams—Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast League and the Chicago Cubs, as well as extensive real estate holdings and an air line.

Work and more work seems to be his motto. He has never had time to do much playing. His first job, aside from selling gum for his father in Australia, was flying a naval plane during the World War.

His present job, however, is not entirely new to him. For seven years he has had first-hand experience as president of the Wrigley interests.

"Policies laid down by my father will be carried out," he said.

EX-TREASURY HEAD WINNING BACK OLD LOVE

Children Said to Have Paved the Way for Reconciliation After 20 Years' Parting

By MARGARET LANE

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Feb. 16 (INS)—A romantic rumor has for the last six months been hovering round the venerable white head of Andrew Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, and newly-appointed ambassador to the Court of St. James.

Gossip has persistently played with the idea that he intends—some even insist he has already done so—remarrying the handsome Irish wife he divorced more than 20 years ago.

Even the Mellons' closest friends refuse to put a direct yes or no on the possibility. Mr. Mellon himself denies it. His ex-wife says nothing. Yet the fact is that there has recently been a reconciliation of the friendliest nature after a complete estrangement of nearly a quarter of a century.

EX-WIFE IN CAPITAL

The rumor of a remarriage has sprung up round the former secretary for several reasons. First, his ex-wife, who has for many years refused to live in America, has returned to Washington. Mr. Mellon, who is leaving this country within the next two weeks to take up office in England, has nevertheless recently bought an expensive 400-acre estate near Middleburg, W. Va., the hunting district within 50 miles of Washington.

The estate is in the name of his son, who has just completed his university career, but it is an imposing place for a young man of 25, even though his father is in the first dozen richest men in the world.

The former Mrs. Mellon is even now in residence on the estate with her son, and her former husband visits them frequently. Mr. and Mrs. Mellon had held no communications for many years, though he has supported her handsomely ever since the divorce.

DEVOTED TO MOTHER.

Friends of her grownup son and daughter know that the children have for years wished for some friendly settlement between their parents, and this reconciliation—of whatever nature it is—is generally thought to be their doing. They have always been devoted to their divorced mother, although separated from her almost from babyhood.

It has been suggested that Mr. Mellon may be unwilling to present himself at the court of St. James with a divorce in the background, and that he intended remarrying his wife in order to take her with him to England, where she loves to live.

OLD RACER DIES NEAR GOAL LINE

On the course that he plodded 25 years ago as a marathoner, Frank P. Lynch, 55, of 88 Washington st., Brighton, was found dead today.

Lynch was elevator starter at Hotel Bradford and for 34 years was employed at the old Adams House where he became known by many notables, including Calvin Coolidge.

In the early hours this morning he was found in Commonwealth ave., near Braves Field, half-way home from work. Lynch made it a practice to walk home for the exercise.

Brookline police found him on a spot that was occupied by those who cheered him on his way in B. A. A. marathons years ago.

For six hours he lay unidentified while police sought to identify him through a Commonwealth ave. address that police found in his pocket.

Identification was finally established through a nephew after Lynch's widow telephoned Brighton police that he hadn't arrived home on time as was his habit.

Lynch, in addition to his activities as a marathoner, also competed in mile and two-mile races. He won many trophies at the Caledonian games during his career.

Police said death was believed to have been due to a heart attack, induced by exertion on the long walk and the extreme cold. An autopsy was ordered.

GANG SUSPECT IS HELD UNDER $30,000 BAIL

Henry E. Mullen, 26, of Washington st., Brockton, alleged member of one of two Greater Boston holdup gangs wrecked by Boston police last week, was held in $30,000 bail when arraigned in Malden court today.

The Brockton man was held in $15,000 for the grand jury for the holdup of William W. Edwards, proprietor of a provision store in Glendale sq., Everett, three weeks ago Saturday night, and in $15,000 as a fugitive from justice in Rhode Island for a $1500 holdup of a dice game in Valley Falls, R. I.

Mullen was arrested in the South Station last Saturday night by Lieut. J. J. Hinchey and Sergt. John Laidlaw of Boston police, on information furnished by Thomas E. Sullivan of South Boston and William Waugh of Jamaica Plain, two other members of the gang who are now under arrest.

The holdup and robbery of Edwards occurred as the provision dealer was garaging his car at his Everett home at night. Three armed men robbed him of $45 and then locked him in the garage. He was not released for some time, and then by neighbors who heard his cries and his kicking on the doors.

Mr. Meek Got Tired of Being Mr. Meek

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 16 (AP)—W. A. Meek has grown tired of living up to his name.

Not long ago a holdup man visited him in his oil station. Mr. Meek stood with his hands in the air while the intruder looted the cash register.

A little later another holdup came in and the same thing happened. Did Mr. Meek mildly submit? He did not. Instead, he swung the ice scraper he was working with and down went the robber, pistol and all.

M'GRATH'S PAY TOPS CUT LIST

Scaled salary reductions, with his own the largest, were advocated for all city employes by Mayor Thomas J. McGrath of Quincy, whose budget was before the City Council today.

The budget is $3,361,000, a reduction of $445,000 from last year, chiefly through wage cuts. The budget provides a 5 per cent reduction on salaries to $3000, 6 per cent on salaries from $3000 to $4000, 8 per cent on salaries from $4000 to $5000, and 10 per cent on salaries of $5000 'and up."

The mayor himself is the only official receiving $5000. The school department, with a separate budget, is not affected.

Grandmother and 2 Babies Aid Bandits in Chicago

Chicago, Feb. 16 (INS)—While police malign Chicago's bandits in one breath, they are forced to admire their ingenuity in the next.

Some months ago police were hard pressed to solve the "grandmother bandit."

A young man would hold up a place of business, run from the store, and completely disappear. Clerks rushing to the door would find nothing but an old lady, alone in a touring car, nonchantly driving away.

But an alert officer happened to be on the scene one day, and he stopped the aged woman and looked in the tonneau, and hiding on the floor was her bandit grandson.

The latest wrinkle is the bandits who is accompanied by his two baby daughters. The little girls have been accomplices in six filling station holdups in the past few weeks, effectively warding off suspicions of the victims when papa drives up to the gas pump.

POISON TRACED IN GIRL'S HOAX DEATH

the first part of the voyage from Naples but that on Feb. 6, as his ship neared Gibraltar, she failed to answer for breakfast or luncheon.

Alarmed, he went with several women passengers to her cabin and found her sleeping restlessly with a high temperature.

This temperature increased, he said, and he thought the girl had double pneumonia.

There was no doctor aboard and he radioed to Gibraltar for medical advice, but before such advice was received the girl had died.

At the inquest he told of having found the tablets of narcotics in the cabin, but said he found no communication except the cablegram informing the girl of Arnold's death. This message, according to other advices, he himself had delivered to her. Several women passengers corroborated his testimony at the inquest.

Failure to find the radiogram sent to her by Arnold on Feb. 2 leads to the belief she may never have received it. In it, Arnold told her "You suit me"—the type of message a girl in love would cherish.

The hoax message—whether a genuine or bogus cablegram or radiogram, is not yet established—continued to be the crux of the international mystery, involving now the state departments of four nations, United States, Great Britain, Italy and Germany.

CONFLICTING CIRCUMSTANCES

The belief that Miss Cook, who was returning to Boston to wed Arnold this week-end, killed herself in grief and despair after receiving the spurious report of her fiance's demise from appendicitis, was strengthened by the traces of drug revealed in the post-mortem examination.

Yet there are circumstances definitely conflicting with this theory.

Secretary of State Stimson wired Arnold that the hoax message was received for Miss Cook by Capt. Uncles, indicating she did not get it until after she boarded the ship at Naples, perhaps not until the ship had sailed.

In that case, why did Miss Cook have in her possession the drugs administered? Boarding the liner at Naples she should have been extremely happy in the outlook for her forthcoming marriage—certainly not planning suicide.

FRESH FROM GERMANY

The Berlin label on the bottle of narcotics indicates she may have had the drug in her possession when she started home, before receiving the hoax message. She had been in Weisbaden with her mother, Mrs. Mabel Cook, and her 18-year-old sister, Louise, until a few days before she sailed.

If she had been using narcotics or ether that fact was unknown to her relatives, they said.

That she left no note discounts the theory of suicide, and murder in the opinion of her aunt, Mrs. Edward Carroll of Freeman st., Brookline, is still a tenable theory.

The Boston Evening American's exclusive story on Saturday that the name "Helen James" was signed to the hoax message was corroborated by Secretary Stimson upon advice from Richard B. Sprague, American consul at Gibraltar, but there is no trace of the identity of such a person.

MAY NOT SEE CABLE

Developments at Gibraltar resulted in authorities there wirelessing Capt. Uncles on the Chinese Prince to keep the hoax message and return it to Gibraltar where, at the inquest, it was not introduced.

Whether Arnold and the girl's relatives here will be permitted even to see it when the liner arrives tomorrow night is a question.

Robert G. Dodge, president of the Boston Bar Association, who is representing Arnold and Mrs. Carroll, today asked for the aid of Attorney Edmund Bell Twomey in solving the mystery.

Twomey said that if Capt. Uncles declines to reveal the contents of the message he will communicate with the British steamship agents requesting an order that he do so.

Something in the nature of an inquest in scheduled when the ship docks. In addition to the captain, as many passengers and members of the crew as possible will be questioned, Twomey said.

Arnold believes that his fiancee's death resulted, at least indirectly, from the contents of the fake message. He thinks that when the message is finally revealed it will show that under the name "Helen James" appears "Supt. ——— Hospital" or some similar phrase that would have led Miss Cook to accept its contents without question.

MOTHER ON WAY

Mrs. Cook and Louise reached Gibralter yesterday on the S. S. Conte Biancamano and continued on that ship toward New York.

Another strange detail was added to the case when the mother and sister arrived in Gibraltar. Sprague, American consul, announced after questioning both that they made no reference to the hoax cablegram and gave no indication of hearing anything about it.

While this added to the belief that it was delivered to the girl after the Chinese Prince left Naples on the journey which was to culminate in her wedding, it also added one more conflicting detail to the strange mystery.

When her death was reported Arnold immediately cabled his condolences to her mother in Naples. It was reported there that this cable surprised her greatly as she had understood he had died, as reported in the hoax cable.

The secret of the hoax message, telling of the death of her fiance and found near her body will be solved in questioning here tomorrow, investigators believe, if the identity of her visitors is established.

FEARS FOUL PLAY

Once in possession of this information, probers will devote every effort to learning whether the vial of poison found in the girl's cabin was brought by a visitor as a harmless remedy for insomnia.

Had the hoax message been delivered before sailing time, investigators believe, the girl would have immediately communicated with her mother. There is no evidence yet unearthed to show that Elizabeth was unhappy or exhibited any sign of grief at sailing time.

WIFE DESERTED ON HONEYMOON

Salem, Feb. 16—Deserted on her honeymoon only a few hours after their wedding, Mrs. Dorothy M. O'Brien of Lynn was awarded a divorce by Judge Alden P. White from Thomas J. O'Brien of that city in the probate court here.

The couple took a suite in a Stewart st., Lynn, apartment the night of their marriage, she declared, on August 6, 1928. The following forenoon she testified, her husband told her that he had "thought it over, and had reached the conclusion that married life with you is not so hot." Bidding her good-by, he vanished, and she had not seen him since, she maintained.

She asked the court for the custody of her three-year-old child, Dorothy F. O'Brien.

SLADE WOMAN BANISHED

Bombay, Feb. 16—Former London society leader, Madeline Slade, now one of Mahatma Gandhi's aids, has been ordered by the government to leave Bombay within 24 hours.

The order was signed by Sir Patrick Kelly, commissioner of police. Miss Slade, the daughter of a British admiral, is ordered not to return to Bombay without official permission.

"Come any time Thursday morning and you will find me still here," she was said to have declared when given the government's order.

Los Angeles Mayor Faces Ouster Move

Los Angeles, Feb. 16 (US)—Bearing 100,790 names, a petition for the recall of Mayor John C. Porter was filed with the city clerk today.

NEW CLUES TO MISSING PAIR

Search for Floyd Stewart and Nathaniel Jones, Harvard Business School students, missing since January 31, turned to Lowell, Hamilton and Wenham today.

Search through the Hamilton and Wenham districts was under way today with forces searching the cottages and camps around Pleasant pond.

Four persons, including Police Chief Arthur Southwick, of Hamilton, identified the missing pair as the two youths seen as late as last Wednesday in those districts. In Lowell a woman noted an automobile parked in front of her home last Wednesday with identical registration as that of the light coupe in which the students disappeared.

Police were inclined to believe the students were in hiding around Hamilton and Wenham. Inspector William LeBlanc hurried there from this city and aided by State Trooper Carl Thomas started a search of the camps.

18 ESCAPE ON BURNING BOAT

Los Angeles, Feb. 16 (AP)—Almost coincident with the finding of the overdue racing sloop Marin, advices today said the 110-foot pleasure yacht Aimee had burned Friday in the Gulf of Lower California, with the 18 persons aboard safely reaching shore.

Strangely, Edward Carpentier of Santa Barbara, Cal., owner of the Marin, was aboard the Aimee when it caught fire.

A telegram from Capt. Thomas F. Kilkenny of the Aimee was received here by his fiancee, Mrs. M. C. Benedict, telling of the Gulf disaster.

"Aimee burned and sank 12 miles south of Lorete, Baja California, Friday afternoon," it said. "All safe."

Mrs. Benedict said the yacht carried two power launches and suggested those aboard probably escaped in them.

The amateur crew of the Marin, formerly national champion of the eight-meter class, was out of food and near exhaustion from battling baffling breezes for nearly 60 hours on the 90-mile sail from Santa Barbara when a coast guard cutter found the sloop off the Malibu coast and took her in tow.

War Ace Breaks Ankles in Fall

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 16—Maj. Reed Landis of the Illinois aeronautics commission, who survived all the dangers of war without a broken bone, slipped when going downstairs in the Senate rest rooms and broke both ankles. He was one of America's leading aces during the war, credited with bringing down 12 enemy planes.

Retrial for Woman on Murder Charge

Cordova, Alaska., Feb. 16 (US)—The first white woman ever to be tried for murder in Alaska today faced a retrial after a jury of 12 men, mostly old "sour doughs," disagreed as to her guilt. The woman, Mrs. Martha Arnott, 65, "mail order bride," was accused of slaying her husband, John M. Arnott, a railroad worker, who was shot in his sleep.

Negro Actor Dead

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 16 (US)—Samuel Davis, the "Gabriel" in "The Green Pastures," Marc Connolly's famous Negro play, is dead here today, after an illness of nearly a week.

BOOKS WILL FORM STRANGE RECORD FOR HISTORIAN

By GILBERT SELDES

WE ARE PUTTING OURSELVES on record more fully, if not more nobly, than any other age has done; we are saying our say frankly and completely. The historian, 50 years from now, will record a severe depression in the years 1929-1932, and instead of looking over a few ledgers and a few newspapers (which are his data for the panics of the past) he will, if he is wise, look also at news-reels, to see what husman beings looked like when they were not prosperous; he will dig out electric recordings used on the radio to hear by what they were amused. And, I suppose, he will look at the books we read during this time.

Gilbert Seldes

Scavengers

I have received, in the past six months, a number of tiresome and offensive books. One publisher exists to whom no scandal is too ill-smelling, no rumor too gross, to be kept out of print; the living and the dead suffer alike; and what he does not do with biography he does with fiction, trading on the unrighteous scandal attached to great names. I do not consider this important, because such scavangers must exist at all times, and no department of human activity is safe from dirty hands. That publishers make a business of mean pornography is not news; but that publishers who are respectable should lower their colors seems to me a sign of actual degeneration.

I have just received a novel issued by a young house (which has so far been decent, if not distinguished) every page of which is an offense of a peculiarly mean kind. Its principal characters are all well known; what they do is all rumor of the nastiest kind. Protected by their rights as writers of fiction, the authors of this book would not be vulnerable to legal action, even if the men they attack could risk the scandal. It seems to me that nothing can be done in such a case except keep silent; I certanly shall not mention the name of this book or give any further clue. But I think that all the publishers who have been worried to discover why their profits are disappearing ought to discipline the unruly members of their profession.

"Time Stood Still"

Not only by way of contrast with dull and cheap books, but on its own merits, "Time Stood Still" recommends itself as a beautiful and profoundly interesting book. It is the story of four years spent in British internment camps by Paul Cohen-Portheim, the German painter, who repaid evil with good when he wrote "England, the Unknown Isle," a penetrating study of the heart of a failing empire. "Time Stood Still" is even more distinguished.

The first sensation Mr. Cohen-Portheim gives us is his own feeling of bewilderment. He was a highly civilized individual, German in nationality, international in his interests. He deliberately went to England because his friends were there, and when he had to register as an alien enemy he quite truthfully said that his home was in Paris. His English friends, men and women of position and importance, treated him decently and handsomely. Then the Lusitania was sunk and Mr. Asquith announced that "for their own safety" all alien enemies would be segregated.

I do not know whether Cohen-Portheim is historically correct in giving the impression that this sort of segregation was a new thing, with only the concentration camps of Cuba and South Africa as forerunners. Certainly neither he nor his English friends dreamed that several thousand men would be separated from their wives and children and sent away to spend three or four years doing absolutely nothing. That is what happened to them. In all the miseries and discomforts of a prison camp nothing broke him down so much as enforced idleness and the inescapable company of others. You could not be alone and there was nothing to do.

Barbed-Wire Sickness

Being an artist, Cohen-Portheim was lucky. He could draw, he could paint, and eventually, he produced some plays. The psychology of the barbed-wire enclosure is made terribly clear in his account of the stage productions. He was by this time in the gentlemen's camp—that is, one in which men with money were allowed to buy certain comforts; but the moment he announced a play everybody assumed that he was doing it only to make money for himself. Profiteering went on inside the barbed wire as profitably as in the streets of London, and human psychology did not change.

I do not know of any book of disastrous personal experience which is written so dispassionately. And if I were the editor of a literary magazine I would send it for review to another painter, who also was in prison and wrote what is so far the best American book which centers on the war—"The Enormous Room," by E. E. Cummings. Cummings' book is all passionate: it is full of a noble indignation against the brutal injustices of prison life. The conditions were different: Cummings was falsely accused by the French and herded with outcasts. And the French did not play the war game, back of the lines, as pleasantly as the British did.

"The Enormous Room" has been published several times—it was particularly recommended in England by Lawrence of Arabia; but it has not yet been recognized as an actual masterpiece. Mr. Cohen-Portheim prefaces his book with a warning: he is afraid that his account of prison may seem too rosy, that he may appear to defend what he really condemns. So, in recommending his book I recommend also "The Enormous Room" in order that the impression of one excellence should be corrected by another.

BEST CONTRACT HANDS

A series of selections by bridge stars of the best illustrations in their careers of precise bidding and excellent play. No. 8—David Burnstine.

New York, Feb. 16 (AP)—Good defense affords an outstanding bridge player more pleasure than hands on which game or slam can be made by the novice. David Burnstine, a member of the "four horsemen," who have a record as the outstanding team of four in tournaments, likes best to recall a hand on which he and Oswald Jacoby set Sherman Stearns and Howard Schenken 1000 pounds.

Jacoby had bid a psychic, hoping to confuse the oposition. Burnstine, having a good hand, passed. Stearns and Schenken interpreted the pass as a sign of weakness and went on to a game contract in no trump when vulnerable. Burnstine doubled. The declared was set there. Here is the hand, from a playoff in the Vanderbilt cup competition:

The players: Sherman Stearns, Dealer, North; Howard Schenken, South; David Burnstine, West; Oswald Jacoby, East.

NORTH
♡—A 5 3 2
◇—A K 8 7 4
♣—Q 10

WEST
♠—A K J 10 2
♡—Q 7
◇—Q 3
♣—J 7 5 2

EAST
♠—4
♡—K J 10 9 8 4
◇—J 9 5 2

SOUTH
♠—Q 7 6 5 3
♡—6
◇—10 6
♣—A K 6 4 3

The bidding: Stearns one diamond; Jacoby two hearts; Schenken two spades; Burnstine pass; Stearns two no trump; Jacoby pass; Schenken three no trump; Burnstine double; all pass.

Stearns took only one heart trick, three club tricks and two diamonds.

At another table P. Hal Sims and Willard S. Karn, teammates of Burnstine and Jacoby, played the cards on which Stearns and Schenken were set. The bidding ran: North one diamond; East one heart; South one spade; West double; north pass; east pass; south two clubs; west pass; north three clubs, all pass. Sims and Karn were set one undoubled for a loss of 100 points. Thus on the hand the horsemen made a net profit of 900 points.

Snowslide Kills Six

Istanbul, Turkey, Feb. 16 (AP)—Six people were killed yesterday in a snow slide off Mount Zigana, near Trebizond, reports reaching here today said, and rescuers were digging for other possible victims.

BLAGDEN TELLS HOW HE FLED KIDNAPERS

Cleveland, Feb. 16 (INS)—Harry H. Blagden, wealthy New York sportsman, kidnaped for ransom five days ago from Lake Placid, N. Y., early today made a daring escape from his captors, who were driving him in a closed delivery truck.

After battling one kidnaper into unconsciousness, Blagden, his clothes torn, his hair matted and suffering from exposure, made his way on foot to the house of a friend, Claude J. Peck, in Cleveland Heights, a suburb.

The house today was under heavy police protection, as authorities believed from the astonishing story told by Blagden he fell victim to a nationwide band of kidnapers.

AT GUN POINT

Blagden declared he was abducted at the point of a gun in the cottage of E. Roland Harriman in Lake Placid, N. Y., last Thursday, driven off in a car, and drugged. Later, he said, his captors forced him to write a ransom note demanding $1000 from his family, which started a far-flung police hunt for the kidnapers.

His chance to free himself came today, when the closed truck in which the three kidnapers drove him stopped at a roadside restaurant not far from here, while two of his captors went to eat.

Left alone with a man he identified as "Curley," Blagden feigned sleep, putting his head on the man's shoulder.

ATTACKED GUARD

"Suddenly I punched him in the stomach," Blagden, an athletic huntsman, said. "I knocked the wind out of him and grabbed his gun. I hit him over the head with it several times until he became unconscious, then ran out of the door of the truck."

Blagden asked passersby where he was. When told Cleveland was nearby, he walked for an hour and a half until he arrived at Peck's home.

He was almost exhausted, but insisted on notifying police and talking by telephone to his brother, Augustus, at Lake Placid to tell him and his 77-year-old father, Thomas Blagden, Sr., of his safety.

TUTORS IN LIEU OF ARMY URGED

Geneva, Feb. 16 (AP) — Two schoolmasters for every soldier was the suggestion for disarmament made to the world conference today by Dr. Ernesto Bosch, Argentine representative. This, he added, is the proportion for which Argentine budget provides.

"Argentina's expenditure for her army amounts only to one-sixth of her entire national budget," he said, "and this expense is decreasing, while the expenditure for education has increased to a great extent."

Ambassador Hugh Gibson, acting chief of the United States delegation, who has been ill for three days, was in his seat again today.

Mirza Hussein Kyan Ala, Persian delegate, supported the French disarmament proposal and said disarmament, security and moral disarmament should go hand in hand.

Dr. Guiseppe Motta, president of the Swiss Confederation and honorary president of the conference, said conciliation between France and Germany must be the keystone of disarmament.

Mills Called to Give Tax Need Estimate

Washington, Feb. 16 (AP)—Secretary Mills appeared before the House ways and means committee today to make further recommendations for increased taxes and to give his views on the proposed selective manufacturers sales tax.

The treasury's program, slated to yield $786,000,000 in 1933, falls short by $455,000,000 of reaching the prospective $1,241,00,00 deficit. He was asked to submit additional recommendation to supplement the proposed increases in income, inheritance and excise taxes and the new gift tax levy.

"Drunken Autoist" Had Been to Dentist

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 12 (AP)—Police thought Earl Baumgartner, 54, was intoxicated when he tried to taurn a corner in his auto, rna into a house and suffered three broken ribs. They took him to a hospital.

"This man," said a doctor, "is still under the effects of an anaesthetic."

Baumgartner had just had three teeth pulled and the dentist had used an anaesthetic.

Norma Shearer and Clark Gable to Star in New Frances Marion Story

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service, Inc.

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Feb. 16—The latest Frances Marion story has been written for Norma Shearer and Clark Gable. Frances, who, like every fond mother is always partial to her newest brain child, says this story is one of her very best. She is calling it "Fidelity."

Louella O. Parsons

Why not "Infidelity?" someone suggested. "The first time I ever wrote about a faithful wife who is long suffering," says Frances, "and I want that title to stick."

If Norma Shearer's role is that of a patient, home-loving wife, it will also be a departure for her.

In other pictures Norma has been the seductive young woman whose mission it is to understand misunderstood husbands of other women.

Hollywood's Own Story

The true story of Hollywood is soon to be movieized. Not a scandal yarn but an analysis of real conditions and something of the trials and vicissitudes of the stars who soar to the top and taste the delights of fame. That's the story Adela Rogers Hyland will write for David Selznick. The contract was signed a few days ago and the picture will go into production shortly. So far no cast has been chosen. Perhaps the idea is still in Adela's head. I don't know. At any rate, Radio is calling the coming picture, "The True Story Of Hollywood." What a chance for a real epic. Perhaps David might be able to induce each one of our famous stars to play himself.

Sennett's 15-Reeler

I reckon Mack Sennett has just become tired of having people ask him the plot and title of his 15-reel road show. Many people have wondered what subject could be interesting enough to run through 15 whole reels. Well, here goes. Mack has decided to call his opus "Hypnotized." Hypnotism by love, by personality, by speech, by character, by romance and by glory will be touched upon in this feature and at the same time a definite plot will carry the theme. Remember, this is the feature production which the creator of the bathing beauties and Keystone nonsense will make with an all-star cast of well known names.

Hollywood Chatter

Constance Bennett is in the hospital for a few days. There will be no operation, she is merely under observation for an old trouble. Infected wisdom teeth so drained her strength that her doctor ordered her to take a rest. I got a valentine. Won't all these girls be jealous when they hear that Jackie Cooper sent me a beautiful valentine with forget-me-nots and roses. What a kick the Swedish population will get out of El Brendel's visit to Minneapolis. Let's hope they don't learn that El is only a Swede by preference. The Malibu season will soon be with us. James Dunn returns next week for his picture, "Society Girl." Wonder what Jimmy will have to say about all this talk of his having secretly married June Knight? Personally, I don't think there is any truth in it.

New One for O'Brien

Eleventh hour production news is the signing of Pat O'Brien by Paramount. He is the lad who was brought out here to play the newspaper reporter, Hildy Johnson, in "The Front Page." This time his picture is "Damaged" and he plays opposite Wynne Gibson. "Damaged" was formerly "Clara Dean." Does "Clara Dean" sound like The Duchess, Bertha M. Clay or Laura Jean Libby. It does, doesn't it? Alison Skipworth has signed a contract. She says it's her first long term movie contract. She plays in "Sinners in the Sun" as her first picture. What a grand actress she is, one of our best among the older generation. Perhaps Colin Clive has made up his mind that American movies are all right after all. He just agreed to return and play the lead in "The Old Dark House" for Universal. If only Mr. Clive could use his astral body how happy he would be. He could be in London and Hollywood at the same time.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Great branches of pink peach blossoms and trees decorated the huge table at the luncheon given JOAN BENNETT by MRS. C. GARDNER SULLIVAN. Forty-six sat down at the table. On one side of the hostess sat MRS. LOUIS B. MAYER. MARGE KELLY found a valuable diamond bracelet lost by MRS. HARRY BEAUMONT and restored it before its owner had time to miss it. SALLY EILERS looked very smart in a new black outfit. JOAN BENNETT wore a brown spring hat and suit. The REGINALD DENNY heir was brought to the luncheon so its petite mother could see that it was properly fed. MRS. McINTYRE, mother of one of the new Fox executives, was a guest. AILEEN ROTHACKER and CHARLOTTE GREENWOOD wore stunning creations of red and blue. The guest of honor had to rush back to the Fox studios before she had a chance to open her shower gifts. BESSIE LOVE who expects the blessed event this coming week, was being given advice on how to raise an infant by at least a dozen young mothers present. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Bulgaria Demands Time to Pay Debts

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 16 (AP)—Bulgaria's foreign creditors must take their choice between a compromise on payments and a moratorium, Premier Mouchanoff said today on his return from Geneva.

"Bulgaria and her business men always have paid their debts promptly," he said, "and if we demand relief now it is not because we don't want to pay, but because we cannot pay."

SALES TAX BILL CALLED BEST U. S. REMEDY

Washington, Feb. 16—Strong endorsement of a general sales tax to meet the treasury deficit is given by the Washington Post.

In its leading editorial the Post strongly supported the sales tax plan now under consideration by the House ways and means committee.

The general sales tax was first advocated by William Randolph Hearst. Members of Congress, shortly before the opening of the present session, visited Canadian cities to study the operations of the sales tax at first hand. The trip was sponsored by Mr. Hearst.

The Post editorial said:

"As the present economic situation is more carefully studied by executive and congressional agencies, it becomes evident that the federal deficit cannot be overcome by heavily taxing the rich and increasing levies upon luxuries.

"There are not enough rich and there are not enough luxuries purchased at any time to provide needed funds.

MUST BALANCE BUDGET.

"Balancing the national budget is a matter of prime importance for the welfare of this country.

"That the general sales tax provides the simplest, most equitable manner of raising large amounts of money has been demonstrated by the experience of a number of nations.

"The nightmare of tax payments lies in the fact that as a rule they have to be paid in large amounts at the end of the year. As a rule individuals and families are not provident. They do not operate their private expenditures under a budget system. Incomes are largely dissipated as they are received, and taxes bulking large after the year's salary has been spent mean an extraordinary effort, or borrowing money to pay them.

"NO YEAR END WORRY"

"All this is avoided by a sales tax. The tax payer does not have to keep any books or worry about a debt at the end of 12 months that is difficult to pay. Every day, out of his cash purchases, he contributes a mite that is in no case a hardship. It is a cent or a fraction of a cent, added to the cost of what he buys. His contribution to the cost of government is so small that it is not noticed.

"But a sales tax to be effective must be general. It must ask a contribution from all citizens in proportion to their expenditures. And in no other way can this contribution be exacted so equitably and automatically as through an invisible tax that is added in minute fractions to the daily outlay.

"Every citizen should contribute a just share toward the support of his government. The sales tax gives him assurance that he will not be obliged to give more than his just share."

Austria Appeals for "Elbow Room"

Vienna, Austria, Feb. 16 (AP)—Austria appealed to all its neighbors and other nations today to join in negotiations for an economic reapproachment.

The appeal was voiced by Chancellor Karl Buresch who told the German, British, French and Italian ministers that his country no longer could endure the "tangled paralysis of trade in central Europe" and needs more "economic elbow room."

JUST FOLLOW THESE RULES

1. Each day for 36 consecutive days (except Sundays) the Boston American will print a Washington Patriotic Prize Puzzle. In each puzzle an historic event in Washington's life will be named. You are invited to solve the puzzle and name the event. The puzzles will be printed in 6 weekly series, each series complete, and each series having its own prize awards.

2. The Boston American will give each week valuable awards to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved puzzles in accordance with these rules. Winning a prize one week does not prevent competition in following weeks.

3. This offer is open to everyone—men, women, boys and girls—except employees of the Hearst newspapers in Boston and members of their families. There is nothing to pay . . . merely a test of your skill and knowledge.

4. Puzzles must be submitted each week, each series of six in a complete set for that week. Do NOT send in each puzzle separately.

5. Each set of six puzzles must be in the mail no later than midnight on Tuesday following publication of the last puzzle in each series. Address "WASHINGTON PATRIOTIC PUZZLE EDITOR," Boston American, P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass.

6. Each entry must be sent by First Class Mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office. Be careful to have your name and address on each puzzle. Make your entry simple and neat. Neatness will count.

7. You need not buy the Boston American in order to compete. You may copy or trace the puzzles and send them in. The Boston American may be examined at 5 Winthrop Square or at Public Libraries free of charge.

8. No entries will be returned.

9. The judges will be appointed by the Boston American. Their decisions will be final. In case of ties a duplicate award will be given to each tying contestant. Your entry in the competition denotes acceptance of all existing rules or any that may be made during the time of contest.

10. The Boston American reserves the right to alter or amend these rules at any time.

The Puzzle Editor Would Appreciate It If Contestants Will Avoid 'Phoning or Writing.

M.C.O.F. OUTING TO MONTREAL SATURDAY

A committee of young men and women, headed by James G. Tobin, are putting the finishing touches to the program of entertainment for the annual three-day carnival of winter sports sponsored for the Washington birthday week-end holidays by James M. Curley, Jr., Court, M. C. O. F.

Already more than 200 reservations for the outing in Montreal have been made.

The party will leave the North Station, Saturday night, at 9 p. m., and is scheduled to arrive at Montreal Sunday morning. The party will attend the 9 o'clock mass at the Basilica of St. James, and immediately afterward will begin the winter sports program. They will have opportunity to see in action the ski champions of the world, who are expected to arrive from Lake Placid in the hopes of capturing the championship of Canada. Later, Sunday, the party will make a tour of the historic shrines of the old city.

On Washington's birthday the party will tour the retail shopping and industrial districts of Montreal. In the evening they will assemble in the ballroom of the Hotel Windsor at a supper dance. At 10:30 the outing train will leave for home, arriving in this city Tuesday morning at 7:30.

The committee in charge includes James G. Tobin, chairman; Andrew J. Dazzi, treasurer; Edmund L. Dolan, Lawrence Costello, Paul G. Curley, George Hughes, Charles E. Manion, William G. O'Hare, chief ranger; Joseph O'Connor, John Moriarty, John Kelly, Myrtle Capual, Editha Hurley, Catherine Griffin, Agnes Fitzgerald, Ann Quigley, Helen Barry and Margaret Donovan.

HOPE WANES FOR AXE VICTIMS

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 16 — Surgical skill was matched today against the mad acts of a 46-year-old father in an effort to save the remaining three of his six children whom he attempted to slaughter with a hatchet.

Three of the children and Bolton E. White, the father, are beyond saving. Louise, 13, and John, four, were almost instant victims of the hatchet thrusts. Two-year-old Hilde died in a hospital later.

White took his own life with a shotgun after committing his maniacal deed.

Three other children, Kathleen, nine, James, 11 and Malcolm, seven, their bodies gashed horribly, hovered between life and death.

Dr. Gray to Speak on Banking Situation

Dr. John H. Gray, former president of the American Economics Association, will be the fifth speaker tonight in the series of discussion lectures held weekly in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple, under the auspices of the League for Industrial Democracy. Dr. Gray's subject will be "Behind the Bank Failures, and the Socialization of Credit."

Eliot Wadsworth Talks on Russia

Eliot Wadsworth, former assistant secretary of the United States Treasury, addressed the senior class of Northeastern University in Bates Hall. Wadsworth, who recently returned from a trip through Russia, spoke on his observations while traveling in that country.

He said the five-year plan was an apparent failure.

20 YEARS OF ILL HEALTH

Then Mrs. Duke Discovered Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Of her own accord, Mrs. Duke sat down and wrote us a glowing tribute to Kellogg's ALL-BRAN:

"I have been constipated all my life, which has been about 20 years, up until last year when I started eating your ALL-BRAN. Since I have been eating it, people tell me I am looking better, and I am sure that I feel a great deal better."—Mrs. L. W. Duke, 210 Hardin Ave., College Park, Ga.

Constipation is usually caused by lack of two things in the diet: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to help give them tone. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides both of these dietary necessities, as well as iron for the blood.

Within the body, the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

How much more natural it is to enjoy this delicious cereal than to risk taking pills and drugs — so often harmful.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily — serious cases with every meal — for most types of constipation. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Sold in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Two More Citizens Lend Milford Money

Milford, Feb. 16—Two more loans, each of $2500, were made the town today in response to an appeal to the citizens after refusal of banks to come through with loans as in past years. The American Legion loaned $2500 and a similar amount was tendered by John J. O'Connor, a retired shoe merchant. This brings the total loaned the town by societies and individuals up to $29,500.

Mother Sentenced as Liquor Seller

Albany, Feb. 16 (US)—Her explanation that she was forced to open a speakeasy to provide for her four small children, following their abandonment by the father, today failed to save Mrs. Rosa Renski, of Syracuse, from a 30-day prison sentence. Federal Judge Cooper agreed to overlook a $1500 fine, so that the woman might return to her family.

FOUNDER'S WEEK

Commemorating the principles on which A & P was founded

An advertisement published in Harper's Weekly in 1867 by the founder of A & P says, "The Proprietors became convinced that the consumers of Tea and Coffee were paying too many and too large profits on these articles... and therefore, organized this Company to do away as far as possible, with these enormous drains upon the consumers, and to supply them with these necessaries at the smallest possible price.... We propose to do away with all these various profits.... with the exception of a small profit to ourselves — which, on our large sales will amply pay us."

The founder's method of direct buying and small profits to ourselves applies today, not only to tea, but to every one of the 1200 items we sell. Our policy was, is and always will be, the elimination of unnecessary profits taken on food between the garden and the grocery shelf.

Skill Needed in Gentle Art of Steak Broiling

Many is the poor butcher who is blamed for tough meats when the husband's anathemas should rest by rights on Friend Wife's marcel. I hold no brief for butchers—in fact, at this moment I'm considering severing my alliance with my present market-man since Sunday's sirloin roast turned out to be blood brother to the dog's stew bee?—but I do know that the choicest steak can be turned into shoe leather, through unskillful cookery.

Firstly, the broiling oven—(if you're cooking by gas)—should be pre-heated for at least 15 minutes, at 500 F.—a snapping hot oven. Broiling over coal—or better yet, charcoal—is another, and simpler, story. The meat, we believe, should be seasoned first with salt and pepper, placed on a hot, well greased broiler and popped into the hot oven, coming to within an inch of the flame. After it has seared, it should be quickly turned, spearing it through the fat—not through the meat.

REALLY DELICIOUS

After the first turning, it should be flipped over every five minutes, until done. And this will be 15 minutes for a one-inch steak; 20 minutes for 1½ inches; 25 minutes for a 2-inch steak; 30 for a 2½-inch steak; and 35 minutes for a 3-inch steak. A three-inch steak may look like a small sirloin roast to you, but there's nothing more delicious, when properly cooked. The oven heat, after the first five minutes can be reduced to 375, and the cooking finished at that temperature.

The waiting platter should be piping hot and there may be a small piece of butter melting on it. Another piece of butter is spread over the top of the hot steak and it should be taken immediately to the table. Let your family wait for your steak, but don't let your steak wait for your family.

PARSLEY POTATOES

The steak in the picture today is served with parsley potatoes, string beans, and diced turnips. To make boiled potatoes extra good, drain them when done, put them on the back of the stove, surrounded with enough milk to come half way up on the potatoes. Cover them and let stand without further cooking. When the potatoes have absorbed the milk, arrange them on a platter, pour over them a little melted butter and a sprinkling of parsley.

A steak dinner is distinctively a he-man's meal. With it he will ask for neither salad nor soup, but he will gratefully accept a piece of pie—especially a piece of lemon meringue pie made thusly:

LEMON MERINGUE PIE CRUST

1½ cups flour
½ tsp. salt
½ cup vegetable shortening
Water (4 to 6 tbsps.)

Sift salt with flour. Cut shortening in with knives or work in lightly with finger tips. Stir in gradually enough water to hold dry ingredients together. Roll out on a floured board to about 1-8 inch thick. Line a pie pan carefully with dough. Prick bottom generously with a fork to prevent bubbles from forming during baking. Bake in a hot oven (400 to 450 deg. F.) until nicely browned.

FILLING

1 cup sugar
2 tbsps. flour
2 tbsps. cornstarch
¼ tsp. salt
2 egg yolks
1½ cups water
1 lemon, juice and rind
1 tsp. shortening.

Blend together sugar, salt, flour and cornstarch. Stir in hot water and cook until thick. Remove from fire and add slowly the slightly beaten yolks and the shortening. Resume cooking over a slow fire for a minute. Stir in lemon juice and grated rind. Cool and pour into a baked pastry shell. Cover with meringue and return to a slow oven (300 deg. F.) until delicately brown.

MERINGUE

Whites of 2 eggs
4 tbsps. sugar, powdered or granulated.

Beat eggs until stiff; add sugar gradually, continuing beating. Spread carefully over filling and bake at 300 deg. F. until delicately brown.

CRANBERRY RELISH

1 box frosted cranberries (2 cups)
1 large orange
¾ cup granulated sugar

Grind cranberries, using the fine blade. Grate rind of orange, then put rest of orange through grinder. Combine cranberries, grated orange rind, and orange pulp with sugar, and let stand in refrigerator 2 to 24 hours to ripen. Store, tightly covered, in the refrigerator. Makes 1 pint.

PORK CHOPS SUPREME

4 chops
Sliced onion
1 tbsp. prepared mustard

Onions are sauted in cooking fat until golden brown and seasoned with salt. Pork chops are spread with a thick layer of prepared mustard, placed in the frying pan and covered with the onions. A little water is added and the chops baked in a moderate oven until tender.

HERE'S A DELICIOUS HE-MAN'S MEAL

Broiled sirloin steak with parsley potatoes, diced turnips and string beans make a he-man's meal—especially if it's topped off with a fluffy frosted lemon pie. Follow the easy directions for these dishes given on this page. Broiled steak is a treat anytime.

Tea Cheapest of Beverages

Tea, they tell us, is our cheapest beverage next to water, for one pound of good tea will yield 300 cups, each costing not more than one-third of a cent. Mighty cheap for the comfort and refreshment that a cup of tea carries to us, don't you think?

What kind of tea do you drink? Nine out of ten women will probably answer, "Orange Pekoe," and by this they probably mean some favorite brand of good black tea.

In reality, all Orange Pekoe may not be good tea. This is simply the name of a leaf of the tea plant, and you can have good, bad or ordinary Orange Pekoe, depending first on the elevation above the level of the sea at which the tea plant is grown, and second, the care taken in the manufacture of the tea itself. The higher the elevation of the garden, the richer the flavor of the leaf.

One of the most cheering things that has come to us in these days of depression is the new half-pound size of our favorite Orange Pekoe brand of tea, that is selling, in the brown label package, for the very moderate price of 35 cents.

Care of Mattresses

Mattresses which are turned and sunned often and protected by washable pads not only last longer, but are more comfortable.

Luscious Hot Cross Buns Have Short Season

The annual debut of the Hot Cross Buns marks not only the beginning of another Lenten season, but gives a definite sign of the coming of spring and the approach of Easter.

Local bakers have been producing fine-quality Hot Cross Buns for the people of Boston town for many years. Last year proved to be the biggest of all in the sale of these buns and this season promises to break the record for Boston bakers are producing finer, richer Hot Cross Buns than ever before.

Made with plump, juicy raisins, spice and other fine-quality ingredients, they are scientifically baked, and combine deliciousness with healthful nutrition and economy. That's why so many local housewives serve them four or five times a week during Lent—in fact, some housewives have placed their daily order for these buns during the Lenten season. My only regret is that their season is so short.

Any Iron Today, Lady?

Your winter diet needs iron! To be sure you are serving foods which contain this valuable mineral, include some of these "irony" foods: Beef, eggs, milk, string beans, dates, beets, cabbage, turnips peanuts, spinach, apples!

Specialty for Lenten Meal

CASSEROLE OF MACARONI AND CLAMS

3 cups cooked macaroni
2 medium size cans clams
2½ cups sauce
Chopped parsley
¼ lb. peanuts, chopped
1 doz. stuffed olives for garnishing

Fry clams in butter until brown. Put a layer of macaroni into casserole, then a layer of browned clams. Cover with sauce and sprinkle with chopped parsley and pepper and salt. Repeat layers until all ingredients used and cover top with the peanuts which have been finely ground. Put in oven until peanut topping is roasted a very dark color. Just before serving, garnish with stuffed olives, and serve with sauce made as follows:

SAUCE

1 cup liquid drained from clams
1½ cups milk
3 tbsps. butter
3 tbsps. flour
2 tbsps. lemon juice
1 egg yolk

Melt butter, add flour then heated milk gradually, then liquid from clams. Add lemon juice just before taking from fire and beat sauce into egg yolk.

Woman Seeks Town Office

Winchester's first woman candidate for selectman has taken out nomination papers. She is Mrs. Elizabeth C. McDonald.

WIFE REFUSED DECREE FROM "WILD MAN"

Salem, Feb. 16—Mrs. Jeanette Pettingell of Newburyport testified that her father, Elzear Lamontague of New Bedford was such a wild man when he was angry that he would even tear the stove apart with a fire going in it, rip the clothes off his wife and even go into the clothes closet and tear the clothing into shreds that hung on hooks.

Mrs. Pettingell's mother Mrs. Eva Margaret Lamontague of Newburyport, sued for divorce on the grounds of cruelty, told Judge Alden P. White she was married in Fall River in 1907, and that she lived with her husband until 1927. Judge Alden P. White later dismissed the case.

Mrs. Lamontague testified that five years after their marriage her husband started drinking, at which times he would abuse everybody in the house, she said, using extreme profanity.

She recounted for the court a night in December, 1923, when she alleges she returned home from the movies and her husband met her at the head of the stairs, grabbed her by the neck, hauled her downstairs and threw her out of the house, locking the door on her.

As the couple's son George took the stand Judge White proceeded to handle the questioning.

The youth, 17 years old, admitted he never witnessed any real disorder in the house, that his father was good to the children, and that the only drinking the father did was on Saturday and Sunday, when he drank beer.

Rev. Charles Clerk Dies in Fall River

Fall River, Feb. 16—The Rev. Charles E. Clerk, 57, pastor of St. Roch's Church for six years, died here at Truesdale Hospital, where he underwent a minor operation several days ago.

Father Clerk succeeded Rev. L. Damase Robert, PR., as pastor of St. Roch's Church, when the latter was assigned permanent ractor of Notre Dame Church to replace the late Mgr. Jean A. Prevost, six years ago.

"FIFI" HOLDEN OFF FOR RENO DIVORCE

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

New York, Feb. 16—When the de luxe "choo-choo" steams away from Manhattan late today, bound for that haven of disillusioned wives—Reno, the star drawing room will be occupied by one of the richest and most popular younger matrons in New York-Philadelphia-Newport-Palm Beach society—"Fifi" Widener Leidy Holden.

And "Cholly Knickerbocker" can announce, exclusively, that the only daughter of Joseph E. Widener, multi-millionaire sportsman and art collector, will not wave "farewell" to the colorful western Nevada hills until she has been granted a decree of divorce from Milton W. Holden.

More than a year ago "Fifi," whose real name is Josephine, separated from "Doc" Holden, whom she married in 1926, shortly after her divorce from Carter Randolph Leidy, member of an old Philadelphia family, and with whom she had eloped, back in 1920, at the tender age of 17.

Since that time "Doc" has been roaming about in Europe, up in Saratoga Springs, down on the Florida coast, and at present is cruising in Southern waters with Vincent Astor on the "Nour Mahal."

At the time of his marriage with the Widener heiress, "Doc" Holden was little known in Quaker City society—and totally unknown so far as the smart set of Gotham was concerned.

As the husband of "Fifi" Widener, "Doc" Holden was swept into the gayest sets in inter-city society at the various fashionable resorts. There are some who will tell you today that society, spelled with a capital "S," caused the former native of Camden, N. J., to become slightly dizzy—and that the blame for "Fifi's" departure for Reno can be placed directly at "Doc's" door.

Others are equally certain "Doc" is more sinned against than sinning—and that "Fifi" is responsible for the smashup of what was termed "the perfect love match" between an heiress and a poor young man.

Like everyone else in society, I happen to know "Joe" Widener's daughter will undoubtedly remarry as soon as she is legally free to accept another nuptial circlet.

She has made no secret of her pleasure over the attentions showered upon her by a personable foreign-born gentleman, who, in the last year, has won a creditable business success under the aegis of that amazing woman, Elisabeth Marbury.

152 LEAVE HERE ON CRUISE TO TROPICS

More than 150 Greater Bostonians embarked from Boston today on two cruises in southern waters, 146 leaving on the Red Star liner Lapland for Havana, Nassau and Bermuda, and six going on the Canadian National liner Lady Nelson to Bermuda, the Barbadoes, Trinidad and Demerara.

In the latter group were Mr. and Mrs. Stanton H. King of Charlestown.

He has been for 39 years superintendent of the Sailors' Haven in Charlestown and is one of 29 children born in Barbadoes of the same father.

Since he left there nearly half a century ago, King has not returned, but on this trip he will show his wife his birthplace. His father had three wives, King says, and all 29 of the children, of which he was the 27th, are living.

Others on the Lady Nelson from Boston on the 28-day cruise were Mrs. P. Emerson, Mrs. N. K. Rindress, Mr. and Mrs. Beal and Dr. Rose Munroe.

A bride and bridegroom, George Fuller of the Fuller Lumber Co., Brighton, and the former Miss Corrie V. Prophet of Rochester, N. Y., were included among the passengers on the Lapland 13-day cruise. They were married Saturday at Rochester, N. Y. He is a graduate of Darmtouth in the class of 1924.

Dr. John D. O'Brien, superintendent of the Boston Sanitaroum at Mattapan, and his daughter, Mary, 23, were also passengers, as were Mrs. Collins Graham, president of the Belmont Women's Club, her husband and their daughter, Jose, five and a half years old.

HITLER: Giant or Pigmy?

"When I walked into Hitler's office," says the noted woman writer who was the last journalist to interview Hitler, "I was convinced that I was meeting the future dictator of Germany." What was her opinion after she talked to him? Read the outspoken statement in March Cosmopolitan by

DOROTHY THOMPSON

BESS STREETER ALDRICH

This immensely popular novelist is introduced for the first time to a Cosmopolitan audience, through a human and poignant story about a submerged woman who suddenly thrilled to the wonder of modern life through radio.

HAZARDS of the AIR-MAIL FLYERS

For the first time is told the amazing chronicle of those couriers of the air who "fly the mail" . . . 122 million miles of epoch-making flying adventure. Written stirringly by Bogart Rogers, an airman of the war, about his peace-time buddies of the air.

"That glamorous actress, Linda Fayne . . ." the newspapers said. Edna Ferber tells Cosmopolitan readers just how "glamorous" the life of a great actress really is. She describes her story as "the record of a single day in the life of a brilliant and successful actress." She gives you a view of a stage star's life you have never seen before. And—you will wonder what great actress Edna Ferber had in mind.

LOUIS BROMFIELD

Louis Bromfield, who wrote the best seller, "Twenty-four Hours," tells of an attractive American girl who became a social climber in Europe. Mary Carlin wanted to know everybody who was anybody from Paris to the Riviera. You see what happened to her character as she pursued her aim.

BESS STREETER ALDRICH

She is in the best-seller lists with two novels, "A White Bird Flying," and "A Lantern in Her Hand," and now she is in Cosmopolitan with a sympathetic portrait of a lovable Irishwoman who through a modern miracle won back her girlhood.

GRAND DUCHESS MARIE

In this opening chapter of the continuation of her life story Grand Duchess Marie tells how as a poverty-stricken refugee she obtained work from Chanel, the great Paris dressmaker. A vivid inside picture of the fashion beehives behind the show windows of the rue de la Paix.

NOW THAT THE SEASON OF OPERA AND BALLS IS over, there is an avalanche of depression dinners. People who have not entertained for years are throwing these stingy parties and feeling positively holy about it.

• • •

ELIZABETH WHEELER

We were invited out the other night to a friend of a friend's house for a depression dinner. Now dinner to us means a large, long and luscious ceremony. At least cream soup if not hors d'oeuvre and cocktails, roast capon if not a family leg o' lamb, salad in season—preferably avocado pear, and glace de chocolat if not apple pie.

• • •

About 40 guests arrived and sat on the edge of their chairs waiting for what never DID show up. Soon a trig maid announced dinner and we all paraded out trying not to look too depressed but failing. The scenery was not encouraging. A scraggly little fern surrounded by china fruit was all that greeted our hungry eyes. After we were seated small wooden dishes—like your pet's plate—was placed before us with a spoonful of creamed chicken (or WAS it lamb) therein, to which was supplemented a lily cup—honest—of black coffee with sugar, my dears, but NO cream. Ice cream in little cones came later and, cross my heart, that was ALL.

• • •

Even worse than that was the lunch to which we were invited where they served spaghetti and sour wine. Is dying of starvation frightfully painful?

• • •

All Practising for Skating Carnival

HAD A GREAT TIME SKATING YESTERDAY AFTERNOON, not that we skate but we like to feel that our expensive skiing suit is not entirely wasted. And we always see a bunch of birds who can skate in one way or another. Everyone was practising for the skating carnival which comes off the end of the month. Mrs. Merrill Griswold, tall and handsome, was performing and what a line of chatter that brilliant young person has. Keeps you in gales of laughter every minute.

• • •

AT THE COUNTRY CLUB were the B. H. Bristow Drapers and Elizabeth Wheeler with her daddy and the twice widowed Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw.

On Visit Abroad

SPEAKING OF THE NAME of Shaw reminds us—Mrs. Quincy Shaw, who is no relation but a charming person residing at 11 Exeter st., has sailed for England to visit her school friend Lady Astor. As she remarked to a friend recently—our pigtails used to match. She was in a dilemma when we saw her as to what she should take to her celebrated friend as a little gift from the State. It was difficult, as Lady Astor does not smoke, make up or take a cocktail. We suggested that gold is always welcome in England.

A Lovely Bride

SAW THE LOVELIEST bride yesterday, Mrs. Winslow Warren, who was the beautiful Jessamine Gordon of the sunny South. She and Winslow were made one at the Leslie Lindley Memorial Chapel and in her tailor made satin and glorious natural coloring—no makeup, not a bit—she was really entrancing. Mr. Warren is a descendant of Richard Warren, who came over in the Mayflower. The bridesmaids wore funny little apricot hats with long tail feathers and carried talisman roses. We saw Miss Margaret Warren of Dedham, aunt of the bridegroom, gazing proudly at her nephew. What a cold day for a wedding!

IRISH CROCHET IS LATEST

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

Serves as Trimming on Smartest Frocks

By DOROTHY ROE

New York, Feb. 16 (US) — Irish crochet, that delight of the Gibson Girl, is back with a bang.

Crochet needles have been dug out of the attics and debutantes are clamoring for the lace that grandmother used to make.

Remember the crocheted bags of 1910—the ones your mother used to make for Christmas presents for her whist club? Well, the new rage is for the same old crochet, only nowadays they're not using it in bags.

White Irish crochet appears as trimming on some of the smartest frocks that have sailed in on the last boat from Paris. Used as a final feminine touch at neckline or cuffs on a navy blue silk tailleur, it is the last whisper in chic.

One effective frock of navy blue flat crepe has tiny puff sleeves made entirely of Irish crochet.

Linen blouses for wear with spring suits are trimmed with the same old crochet, adding a piquant and feminine touch to a costume otherwise tailored to a masculine degree.

Sweaters of Irish crochet are all the rage, especially in white. If you're wealthy, you may buy a genuine hand-crocheted model which would knock anybody's eye out when worn with a tailleur of navy or dark brown.

If you're interested in saving dollars you may buy a machine-knit sweater of simulated Irish chochet which looks so much like the real thing that only an expert could tell the difference, and be both smart and happy for something like $3.95. Or, if you're clever, you may crochet your own.

Democratic Club to Conduct Whist

A whist party will be conducted by the All Boston Women's Democratic Club at the home of Mrs. Annie Dick at 3 Bartlett st., Charlestown. Mrs. Dick and Mrs. Margaret Burke, the president, are in charge.

Maria Tucker Bride of J. F. Armstrong

Announcement is made of the marriage of James F. Armstrong, 172 Maple st., Malden, a Malden business man, and Miss Maria Lucia Tucker of 128 Summer st., Malden, which took place Saturday, with Rev. Seth Rogers Brooks of the First Universalist church of Malden, officiating. A few friends of the couple witnessed the ceremony. It was the third marriage for Mr. Armstrong.

Williams is general assistant and chairman of supplies.

New Feature

Mrs. Cunningham may be reached at 53 Seaver st., Brookline, for information concerning Class 1, and Mrs. Burrage at 29 Hereford st., is chairman of Class 2. Individual members and member clubs are asked to return their entry blanks to Miss Helen Guild, 222 Commonwealth ave., as early as possible.

One feature in which there is no competition is to be shown in the first class. This is to be a group of garden clubs working together for the general effect. This year the mezzanine [illegible] to be transformed into a club restaurant. The second class is for individual members only, and the setting will be changed three times during the exhibit.

Private View

On Wednesday evening, March 9, at the private view, tables will be arranged for supper at a dance and white flowers [illegible] with a touch of red [illegible] be used in addition to the [illegible] baskets and hanging flower pots which will remain throughout the exhibition.

On the second day, [illegible] March 11, any colors may be used on the tables set for afternoon tea.

Lindsey Chapel Is Scene of Wedding

Miss Jessamine Gordon, daughter of Mrs. Bettie Gordon of Savannah, Ga., and Boston and the late Col. Gordon, was married yesterday to Mr. Winslow Warren in the [illegible] Emmanuel Church. Mr. Warren is the son of Mrs. Winslow Warren and the late Mr. Warren of Walpole.

The bride, given in marriage by her [illegible], was gowned in ivory satin, carrying a bouquet of white roses, lilies-of-the-valley and freesia. Miss Penelope Warren, sister of Mr. Warren, served as maid of honor. The two bridesmaids, Miss Barbara [illegible]

Mr. Warren was attended by Mr. Martin S. Firth as best man. The ushers were the Messrs. Thomas Orchard of Pittsburgh, Alan W. McCarthy of Maplewood, N. J., Roscoe G. Chase of Geneva, N. Y., and Parke Cummings of New York.

Returning to Boston about March 1 Mr. and Mrs. Warren will make their home at 73 Pinckney st.

Miss Marean is a graduate of Vassar College.

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

—By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE—

"On April 2, 1866, at the tender age of 24 hours, I became the honorary colonel of the 73d Krimsky Infantry Regiment, an officer of the fourth rifle battalion of the Imperial Guard, an officer of the Guard Hussars, an officer of the Guard Artillery Brigade, and an officer of the Caucasian Grenadier Division."

Thus the Grand Duke Alexander, of Russia, begins his narrative, "Once a Grand Duke" (Farrar & Rinehart).

A salute of 101 guns had been fired a few moments after his birth. Today, he is an exile.

He recalls for us the first early years of his education, and no one, reading these pages, will envy anyone born to the purple. Every morning at 6 o'clock he was awakened, and severe punishment followed an attempt to sleep "just five minutes more." Then came prayers, a cold bath, breakfast of tea, bread and butter. "Any other ingredient had been strictly forbidden lest we should develop a taste for a luxurious life." Then came gymnastics and practice with firearms. At the age of 10 this little Grand Duke would have been able to take part in the bombardment of a large city. His days were crowded with lessons; a regiment of tutors was always about him.

"The smallest mistake in spelling of a German word deprived us of dessert," the Grand Duke tells us. "It shall always remain a mystery to me how such an insane system did not succeed in dulling our wits and fostering a hatred for all subjects we had to study in our childhood."

• • •

But if French irregular verbs disturbed these children, they were nothing to the sound of bombs, which were always ringing in their little ears. "The butler serving morning coffee might have been in the employ of the nihilists, for all we knew. A janitor coming to clean the fireplace was a potential bearer of an infernal machine." Thus they lived, from the very beginning, in terror, little dreaming of the greater sorrows to come.

There came a day, in 1881, when the Czar, Alexander II, was assassinated and a new regime began.

When he was twenty-seven, his duties called him to America, officially to express to President Cleveland "the gratitude of my imperial cousin, Czar Alexander III, for the help extended by the American [illegible] during the Russian famine [illegible] to get an advance taste of the future and have the palm of my hand read by the spirit of a virgin race." And he goes on.

"On a hot June night, while driving up gayly-decorated Fifth ave. toward the residence of John Jacob Astor, and looking at the row of illuminated mansions, I suddenly felt the mysterious breath of a new epoch. So this was the land of my dreams! . . . Russia! what was the matter with us? Why did we not follow the American way of doing things? Europe! Europe! It was our eternal fatal desire to mingle with Europe that had put us back, God knows how many years. Right then and there, during the few remaining minutes of my ride, in 1893, I commenced working out a large plan for the Americanization of Russia."

But America was going through one of her financial crises and the extracts from the papers of those days will hearten one in the present state of depression. The Grand Duke wished to come back to us, but his time was not his own. Instead, he returned to Russia and married.

• • •

The World War and the beginning of the Russian Revolution are given in kaleidoscopic form, and nothing could be much more exciting than the Grand Duke's final escape—on a British battleship.

He can write, calmly now, of how two of his brothers met their doom in St. Petersburg in the fortress of Peter and Paul, where all the Russian Czars had been buried since the reign of Peter the Great. With them were Grand Duke Paul—father of Grand Duchess Marie—and Grand Duke Dimitri Constantinovich. The warden of the jail, a certain Gordienko, who used to receive valuable presents from the Czar each Christmas, commanded the firing squad. According to the Soviet newspapers, Nicholas Michailovich kept his favorite Persian cat in his lap till the very last moment. Dimitry Constantinovich, a fanatically religious man, prayed aloud for the salvation of the souls of his executioners.

Thus does royalty pass out. It is an engrossing story, full of sadness and terror and courage.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy Is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Heavens, No!—it's just knowing how to take care of them
LUX

This way preserves the ELASTICITY*

•• that makes stockings fit and wear

DO YOU KNOW why new stockings fit with such alluring smoothness? Because each silk thread is elastic. Stretch it—it springs right back into shape.

But when elasticity is lost—the stretched threads can't spring back. Then you get wrinkly ankles—crooked seams. Runs start this way, too—the silk threads break, instead of giving, under strain.

That is why Lux is especially made to preserve elasticity—the secret of stocking fit and wear.

*The LUX Way

Don't rub with cake soap. It destroys the elasticity. Avoid ordinary soaps—cakes, powders, chips. These often contain harmful alkali which weakens and fades silks. Lux has no harmful alkali.

ROOSEVELT PUT IN RACE FOR BAY STATE

Massachusetts Democrats today looked forward to a fierce battle in the primaries on April 26 following announcement by supporters of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of their plans to elect a delegation pledged to support his candidacy for president.

First announcement of the contemplated campaign came at the State House yesterday when Strabo V. Claggett, defeated candidate for lieutenant-governor in 1930, informed Gov. Ely that a fight would be waged to elect delegates-at-large and from every congressional district pledged to Roosevelt.

SON CONFIRMS PLAN

James D. Roosevelt, son of the New York governor, confirmed Claggett's announcement and added that he might himself be a candidate for delegate-at-large. He said he expected his father's consent to the use of his name on the primary ballot would be forthcoming at the proper time.

Gov. Ely had little comment to make on Claggett's announcement except to remark, "That's fine."

Claggett pointed out that a strong Roosevelt sentiment existed in this state even among those who were calling for a Smith draft. He asserted he had favored Smith before and would now but he was convinced such support would be in a lost cause.

He expressed certainty that some delegates pledged to Roosevelt could be secured in this state and these with others secured throughout the country would give the governor the nomination on the first ballot.

He announced his intention of having Mayor Curley on his slate although he admitted he had not yet completed arrangements for [illegible]

MAYOR MURPHY, TOO

He did admit that in addition to Mayor Curley and himself he expected to have James D. Roosevelt and Mayor John J. Murphy of Somerville.

It was believed last night, however, that later announcements regarding their willingness to run as delegates-at-large might be received from Michael A. O'Leary and Charles H. McGlue, both former Democratic State chairmen, and former Asst. U. S. Atty. John H. Backus of New Bedford, a staunch Roosevelt supporter for many years.

Chairman Frank Donahue, of the state committee, stated last night he preferred not to comment on Claggett's announcement. He is arranging a conference on the Smith support to be held on the arrival of U. S. Senator David I. Walsh early next week.

Former Mayor Frederic F. Small, of Rochester, N. H., leading Democrat of that section, today expressed the opinion that Roosevelt would be nominated by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York for the presidency, or that his nomination would be seconded by Smith.

Haverhill's First Automobile Owner

Haverhill, Feb. 16—William H. Wilkinson was the first person in Haverhill to own an auto. This was back in 1898, and the machine was the 10th Stanley steamer built.

The establishment of the pioneer claim has been bothering residents of this city for the past week and was settled after more than a score of claimants came forward to seek the honor.

CONGRESS AND HOOVER AGREE

Washington, Feb. 16 (AP)—President Hoover's applauded appointment of Benjamin N. Cardozo to the Supreme Court completes a list of popular selections for prominent places he has made this year.

With one exception, there has been no substantial opposition to any of the important choices by the chief executive during the present Congress.

In the last Congress nominations were one of the leading items in the bitter and protracted conflict between the President and the Senate.

This session one nominee after another has been approved in record time, with almost no dissent uttered.

GARNER BOOM BIG WORRY TO ROOSEVELT

Washington, Feb. 16 (US)—Concerned at Speaker Garner's fast growing presidential boom, the forces of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt today had extended the "olive branch" to the Texan's camp.

Homer S. Cummings, Roosevelt's wily political strategist, held a long conference on the general political situation with Senator Tom Connally of Texas, regarded as the Garner preconvention manager.

SEES GARNER AS FOE

While both declined to comment on what took place, it was learned that Cummings is most anxious to keep Garner in the role of friend, not enemy.

Since coming here several days ago to get a line on the political outlook from senators and representatives, Cummings has had impressed upon him the fact that Garner is a formidable foe—in fact the outstanding choice whom Roosevelt must beat if he hopes to become the party standard-bearer.

A shrewd tactician, Cummings realizes that offending the Garner camp might easily prove a fatal blunder because of the large number of delegates who will go to Chicago pledged to the Garner candidacy. Hence his peace meeting and assurances of friendship to Connally.

Another factor in the situation is the heavy drive now being made by the Roosevelt forces, under Cummings' direction, to secure pledged delegates.

FIGHT FOR DELEGATES

This effort to secure delegates instructed for Roosevelt is the answer of his campaign managers to the recent statement by Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic executive committee, advising the party to send unpledged delegates and thus allow the convention to choose the nominees.

An open rift with the Roosevelt camp has resulted from this statement by Shouse, whom they regard as an ally of Chairman Raskob and Al Smith. Without conflicting with "favorite son" movements, Cummings is anxious to sew up the delegates for Roosevelt wherever possible.

Legislature Refuses to Act on Golf Links

The petition for a public golf links in or near the Middlesex Fells reservation was referred to the next General Court by the Legislature. Representative William H. Doyle of Malden and the late Representative Richard D. Crockwell of Medford were joint sponsors of the bill and an appropriation of $100,000 was requested.

Senator Moses, in Address, Scores 'Buck Passing'

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP)—Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire denounced creation of government bureaus as "a weak device to thrust the government into doing what the community should do for itself" in an address here last night.

Governmental regulation of private life, he said, had changed the motto of the country from "E Pluribus Unum" to "Pass the Buck." He urged raising of the tariff portal to develop American products for the American market and declared the mass of legislation before Congress seemed to have but one object, and that to take away $4.95 from everybody who has $5.

"I speak particularly," he said, addressing the Chicago Coal Merchants Association, "of the Kelly-Davis bill to regulate interstate and foreign commerce in bituminous coal which creates a coal commission.

"It is another of the measures to regulate the private life of the citizen.

"Once a mother saw to it that her offspring brushed his teeth and washed behind the ears. Now a school nurse is paid to do it. The individual looks to the community, the community to the Legislature and the Legislature to the Congress, with the result that no one here present, no matter how law abiding, can lay his head on his pillow at night without having violated some law, even in his most circumspect day."

GREATER BOSTON NEWS

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

BOSTON, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1932

SECOND SECTION

THIS IS LIFE

HUMAN RACE IS GETTING TOO CLEVER FOR ITS OWN GOOD

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

I QUOTE WITHOUT PERMISSION from The Tech, the newspaper published by the undergraduates at Technology, one however, which is pretty successful at keeping out of the kind of trouble which the Harvard Crimson periodically gets itself into. The Tech opines as follows:

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Home of several types of integraph, a ball bearing, bouncing machine decidedly fascinating, the Institute has taken under its wing another little mechanical marvel, an apple-vending machine—to be exact, two apple-vending machines.

"Not that vending machines in themselves are particularly interesting, even to the scientific inquiring mind of the Technology student. Nor are the little glass cages which dispense apples if a nickel is dropped in the slot any different from the rest. The whole business is wrapped up in the amazing speed with which science follows the pioneering mind. 'Twas only last winter that apples were sold from a soap box on the corner. Now the earnest student drops his nickel and gets his apple scientifically."

• • •

The End Not Yet in Sight

I am really indebted to The Tech for this little bit of news, for I am inclined to think that it is significant, just as the editors in their laconic fashion do. A year ago apple selling seemed to be the last recourse of the unemployed—everywhere, except in Boston where for some curious reason, apparently connected with local pride, the unemployed were allowed to panhandle but were not allowed to peddle.

Already many of the little jobs that can be undertaken by people who can't undertake anything else, have been taken away. We never see any more on the streets the mild and inoffensive peddlers of fruits and penny candies and gum and cakes, who were a familiar sight in the days of our fathers and grandfathers. The boy bootblacks are a vanishing race. I shouldn't be at all surprised if one of these days we had to buy our newspapers from ungainly iron contraptions stuck up on the street corners, which would shoot out a paper at the touch of a button. Probably the contraption would require a nickel to operate, for the extra "service," and some corporation would make big money, and the city would rake in a good sized license fee, and the boys who later make good would lack the first step on the long road to political or legal or artistic renown.

As I listen I seem to hear faintly the late Horatio Alger turning rapidly in his grave. What would he have done, for his genre studies of the poor but neat American boy, if there had been no bootblacks and no newsboys? An iron contraption that requires to be fed with a nickel can't pick up old ladies' pocket-books, or chase rich old gentlemen's hats or rescue fashionable young girls from under the hooves of plunging steeds. At least, not without first being fed a nickel, and one seldom has a nickel handy in such an emergency.

Machines Blocking the Road

Neither can one adopt a nickel-in-the-slot contraption and send it to college, or give it an humble position in the bank, that leads straight to the presidency, or marry it off to the lovely rescued damsel. At least, not until the manufacturers make their vending machines a lot more versatile than they are at present.

Every day in every way the road to wealth and opportunity is being barred by machinery. I suppose the time will come when we shall be able to conduct most of the business of life without even seeing a friendly face. Our pockets will be bulged and sagging with nickels and dimes, since there will be no one to make change for us. Long rows of glass-fronted cases with appropriate lebels will swallow small coins and shoot out infinitesimal amounts of this, that, and the other commodity, at a bulk cost of three or four times our present prices.

If the machine gives us a tan shoeshine when we thought we were getting a black one, if the collar is the wrong size and the tie the wrong color, if the coffee is too weak and the eggs too strong, if the newspapers bear yesterday's date line and the apples are wormy, there will be nobody to complain to, nobody to have a good old-fashioned, heart-warming row with, no way to get satisfaction. There will, of course, be an address to which you can write, but correspondence on such matters is cold and uncomforting, expensive, procrastinating, and unavailing.

Will the time come when you must enter your class-room at school, choose your lecture from the labels on the contraptions, drop in your quarter, and get it all properly canned, with no opportunity to talk back to the teacher. I fear me!

I suspect that the human race is getting just too utterly clever for its own good, for its own comfort, even for its own continuance. Bit by bit all the available simple jobs are being taken away from all the people who are not capable of doing anything but that sort of job. Bit by bit we are filling our cities with unemployed and unemployables, who perhaps might be able to pick up decent little livings at occupations which need no particular brains or skill, but which do need—psychologically speaking—a friendly face and a human voice.

Robots Filling All the Jobs

The robot or the nickel-in-the-slot contraption may be more efficient, more quick, more sanitary, more certain—though I am inclined to doubt even that. But the main trouble with them is that they are not human. It is true that we are trying to make our telephone operators, our lunch counter salesmen, our theater ushers, and our college professors just as nearly inhuman as we possibly can, just as standardized and mechanical and efficient as it is humanly possible to be. But there's something not quite right somewhere, and so the next step will be to replace them altogether by machines.

And then we shall wonder more than ever why the unemployed crowd the streets, and why three million dollar drives are necessary, and why industry doesn't absorb the population. How can it, with cute inventors turning out idiotic and unnecessary robots to do their work faster than the state can take care of them? The only remedy I can see is to keep everybody under 25 in school and everybody over 50 in institutions, and then possibly there may be enough work for the remainder. Or else to take a tip from Samuel Butler's admirable inhabitants of Erewhon, and forbid all machines altogether.

Woman Charges Agent Forged $170 Check

INSURANCE MAN IS ACCUSED ON 8 COUNTS

Defendant Raised $16 "Loan" to Larger Amount, Witness Says at Trial

Although she sought a loan of but $16.08, a check for $170.80 was endorsed with her forged signature, Mrs. Julia F. Fernandes of Lowell testified today in Middlesex Superior Court at the trial of Ernest Ferron, former Lowell insurance agent.

Ferron went on trial yesterday before a jury charged in four counts with larceny and in four counts with forging and uttering.

According to Mrs. Fernandes' testimony, she asked Ferron, then her insurance agent, to get a loan of $16.08 to apply as a premium.

She signed a blank application, she said at Ferron's suggestion and he said he would "take care of it."

Then she forgot it until 10 months later when she learned that $170.80 had been loaned in her name.

Shown a check for that amount purported to have been indorsed by her, Mrs. Fernandes denied that the indorsement was her signature.

Her first information, she said, that the larger amount had been issued by the company as a loan came when Leo Morris, assistant superintendhent of the insurance company, called and questioned her relative to her insurance transactions with Ferron.

NEWTON FOLK "HIGH HAT"

The question of the social superiority of the residents of Hunnewell ave., Newton, and Hunnewell ave., Brighton, was raised before the Newton board of aldermen last night. The question came up while Attorney Philip Nichols was arguing for a petition brought before the board seeking to have the Newton Hunnewell ave. extended to the Brighton Hunnewell ave.

Nichols represented the Wolting estate, which seeks to have the two avenues joined. He said that most of the opposition to his petition came from Newtonites, who felt socially superior to the residents of the Brighton side.

200 FLEE FIRE IN HALL

Two hundred men and women were driven out of Loring Hall in Hingham last night when a fire broke out backstage while one of the bi-weekly movie programs was being shown.

Although the hall was becoming filled with smoke rapidly, there was little confusion and the crowd filed out calmly.

The presence of the fire was first noticed by Charles Turpin of Main st., Hingham, who was sitting in the front row. He smelled smoke and went to the rear of the hall, where he reported it to Officer Henry Wigmore. The latter went backstage and found the blaze breaking out from the chimney.

Before he was able to warn the audience, the auditorium began filling with smoke and they all filed out. The blaze spread into the partitions and went up to the roof in the back part of the building, causing $500 damage before it was extinguished.

KIDNAPER AUTO "TIP" WRONG

Discovery was made today that the auto plate numbers given police by witnesses of a "kidnaping" in Roxbury early this morning were incorrect.

Police sent the numerals out by teletype and flashed the alarm all over New England, only to learn from the motor vehicle registry several hours later that plates of that number have not yet been issued.

A man and woman witness reported to police of Dudley st. division that they saw a man knock down a girl at Washington and Walnut Park sts., near Egleston sq., an dthen carry her away in the machine.

BUDGET CUT IN CHELSEA

Chelsea aldermen slashed $65,000 from the city budget early today in a late meeting that considered all expenses for 1932 with the exception of schools.

The new budget totalled $1,775,318 after cuts were made principally in the appropriation for street and sidewalk repairs.

The school budget, totalling $631,727, will be taken up by the board next week.

Sale of $18,000 worth of short-term bonds at 6 per cent was also announced at the meeting making a total of $26,000 of a recent issue that have been sold.

Police Want New "Wagon"

Among the improvements asked by Police Chief Daniel W. Conners of Medford in this year's budget, is a new patrol. The present patrol has been in use 15 years.

8 RESCUED IN BLAZE

Eight persons were rescued last night during a fire in the three-story dwelling at 282 West Third st., South Boston.

The families of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Westhaver and Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Gurriero, on the second and third floors, were trapped by smoke that rolled up from the lower floor.

Patrolman Daniel Flood of the Athens st. station sounded the alarm and rushed to the second floor where he assisted Mrs. Ann Westhaver to carry her daughter, Thelma, 8, and Walter 4, down the stairs.

Ladderman Joseph Goggin and Capt. James Lunny of Ladder 5 carried Rosalie Westhaver, 22 months, and Irene Westhaver, 6, down the ladder from the second floor. They then rescued Mrs. Mae Gurriero, and her three children, Francis, 11, Angelina, 7, and Julia 5, from the third floor.

WOMAN WINS IN SWAMPSCOTT

In the only contest in the Swampscott town election, [illegible] Eleanor Ingelinger defeated George C. Thomas for the three-year term on the school committee.

Thomas has been a member of the committee for the last [illegible] years and was its chairman during the last two years.

Other town officers were elected yesterday, as follows: Moderator, John R. Hurlburt, who was also elected to the planning board for three years; selectmen, R. Wyer Greene, Harry E. Hardy, Edward LaCroix (re-elected).

School committee (2 years), Thomas S. Bubier; board of public welfare (3 years), Harry E. Cahoon (2 years), Mrs. Jeannette C. Derling; board of health (3 years), [illegible] water commissioner Harold G. Enholm; assessor, Edward A. Maxfield; park commissioner (3 years), Stuart P. Ellis (re-elected); constables, George J. Place, Frank H. Bradford, Willis E. Shepard.

The town meeting will be held Feb. 23.

WATCHMAN, 74, WAS WILLING TO TRADE

O'Brine Tells of His Icy Plunge in Harbor to Save Girl Would-Be Suicide

"Well, I figured here I was, an old man who had lived his life—and there was a young girl with all her life yet to live——"

And so Peter W. O'Brine, 74, of 26 Fox st., Dorchester, climbed an eight-foot fence, slid down into the freezing water off Battery Wharf and rescued Miss Irma Yeaton, 21, of Chestnut st., Lynn, from drowning.

O'Brine, a watchman, who said he had not been in swimming for three years until forced to last night, while the mercury snapped far below freezing in Haymarket Relief Hospital today, where both he and the girl were kept overnight for treatment, described his experience.

"There wasn't any 50-foot swim nor any wild battle in the water for any long period," said the elderly watchman modestly. In fact, the girl kept yelling 'Save me. Save me.'

"When I first heard that girl in the water I started to climb an eight-foot fence at the wharf. There are three strands of barbed wire on top of the fence and my clothing caught. I thought I was stuck for fair, but I finally tore away and climbed down on the other side.

"Then I slid down a wet pile, with one arm around the pile and the other grabbing for the girl, who was thrashing in the water right near the wharf. I got hold of her coat or dress or something but my grip slipped.

"Then I grabbed her by the hair and held her head above water. John Golden (of 36 Vixen st., Dorchester) a watchman at the Elevated power house, was out by that time and he threw us a rope. We may not have got out of the water at all if it wasn't for him. It was colder'n tarnation."

O'Brine declared he was none the worse for his experience today.

The girl, who said she had attempted suicide upon learning that she must forego her ambition to become a nurse had also recovered and had entirely changed her mind about taking her life.

JURY DISAGREES IN THEFT CASE

A disagreement was reported today by the Suffolk county jury in the case of Joseph Anzaldi, 23, of Chelsea st., East Boston, charged with robbery from Endicott Peabody Saltonstall, nephew of [illegible] Saltonstall, Speaker of the House.

Anzaldi was charged with robbing young Saltonstall in Beacon st. last October of $2 in currency, a pocketbook, watch and chain, pocket knife and 57 train tickets.

Anzaldi's defense was that he was at the home of friends in Arlington on the night the robbery was committed.

Pool Room License Refused

The Newton board of aldermen last night denied the petitions of Dominic Proia for a permit for a pool room in Washington st., West Newton, and Antonina Kulesza for a lodging house license in Mechanic st., Newton Upper Falls.

Colt Calls Police to Guard Lola

What Has Gone Before

At 11.30 on New Year's Eve, Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt arrives at the exclusive Mayfair Club in response to a mysterious summons from District Attorney Merle Dougherty. The latter informs Colt he believes Lola Carewe, known as The Night Club Lady, widow of Gaylord Gifford the cotton millionaire, is the "higher-up" responsible for numerous jewel robberies perpetrated recently which baffle the police. She arrives at the Mayfair accompanied by Vincent Rowland, an attorney. At Lola's urgent request Colt joins her party and she tells him her life is threatened.

Now Read On

THE WAITER brought the dishes of their order. Lola Carewe toyed with her fork, then lifted it about to taste a curry of lamb and rice. Colt's voice, casual, indifferent, stayed her.

"I would not eat that if I really felt——"

"Of course," she murmured. "What a silly fool I would be to touch anything now."

"Ah, my dear Colt, then you do take this threat seriously," exclaimed Vincent Rowland with deep satisfaction.

"Miss Carewe's life may be in danger," granted Colt, tamping out his cigarette. "At least, I think she should be well-guarded tonight. I shall be glad to put some of our picked men at her disposal."

A little cry came from Lola Carewe and a grunt of disappointment from Rowland. Dougherty was staring meaningfully at the [illegible].

"Miss Carewe had hoped for your personal handling of this case," essayed the elderly attorney. "And so, in fact, did I. It would be a great favor to me——"

"I feel that only you can save my life, Mr. Colt," shuddered Lola, her white fingers quivering as they toyed with her ruby. "No one else—I am really terrified——"

"Thatcher," cried Dougherty, "we can't pass this up. It's natural—you understand."

COLT AGREES TO ACT

"Very well," he yielded, "I shall be glad to supervise your protection by the police department—if you think you need that. But only on my own terms."

"Anything!" cried Lola.

"And what are your terms?" from Vincent Rowland.

"That you, Miss Carewe, place yourself and your household entirely in my hands. We must go to your home at the moment and you must answer all my questions."

"Willingly," Lola Carewe agreed, with a docile, child-like gaze.

"There must be no deviation of any kind from police orders," emphasized Colt.

"You shall be the boss," she promised laughing with an effort at lightness.

Poor Lola! If she had only kept that promise!

Five minutes later I was talking to Headquarters from a telephone booth under the staircase outside the Crystal Room. At the other end of the wire was Inspector Flynn. I was transmitting Colt's orders.

"The chief wants detectives and one woman operative sent at once to the apartment house at No. 300 E. 58th st. Tell them to meet us in the hallway on the 22nd floor. Fix it with the apartment house manager. And the chief says to step on it."

"O and also h" growled Inspector Flynn as he hung up.

Emerging from the telephone booth, I found Detective H[illegible] Harris [illegible] the New York [illegible] ity with the opposite sex gained the police department many valuable tips. Colt had directed Harris to assist me.

"Everything set," Harris told me. "The Commissioner's car is now in front of the 46th st. entrance. Three motorcycle patrolmen are standing by. Would you mind telling me what all this is about?"

I pretended not to hear him as I reclaimed hat, stick and overcoat and led the way up the red-

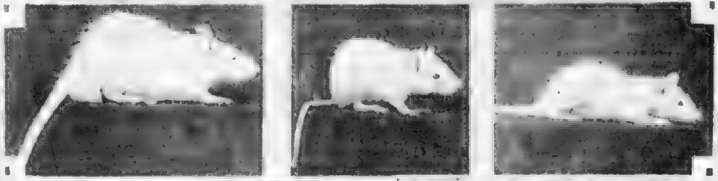
M. I. T. GIVES MEDICAL WORLD NEW RICKETS CURE



A new cure for rickets has been announced at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It is a result of an experiment by Robert S. Harris and John W. M. Bunker, of the institute's department of biology and public health, and Dr. Nicholas A. Milas, of the research department of organic chemistry. Hundreds of animals were used in the tests. Here are three of the outstanding examples. Each rat weighed 51 grams at the beginning of the tests. They were 30 days old and were taken from the same litter. The rat on the left was fed a diet rich in vitamin D for 21 days. He shows normal growth. The rat in the center was fed a diet containing no vitamin D for 21 days. He has severe rickets and gained 9 grams during the test. Note the shortened nose and body. The rat on the right was fed the Steenbock diet (containing no vitamin D), but in addition he received in isolated doses 10 units of vitamin D daily, or 10 times what he needed. While he did not get rickets as did the center rat, he gained but 8 grams and the wetted appearance of his fur, a sign of abnormal organic functioning, indicates that too much vitamin D may be harmful. (Photos from the Technology Review.)

Robert S. Harris, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, class of '28, one of the three men who gave the new rickets cure to the world. It is by means of synthetic organic peroxides. They have a particular chemical grouping of oxygen which is believed to be the secret of their power to cure rickets. (Staff photo.)

$25000 FOR HER JAWBONE BOON TO WOMAN

By EDWARD M. MARTIN

Mrs. Catherine C. Bennett of 29 Mt. Vernon st., Brighton, who was awarded $25,000 for the loss of her lower left jawbone, will devote the money toward restoring her health and furnishing a home and education for her children.

The verdict, one of the largest of its kind on record, was returned by the jury in Judge Sisk's session of Suffolk Superior Civil Court against Dr. Vitus A. Fitzgerald, who, Mrs. Bennett alleged, caused her to loose her jawbone through a tooth extraction.

"Twenty five thousand dollars is quite useful but so is a person's jawbone," Mrs. Bennett declared today.

"My first move after I receive the amount awarded me will be to undergo medical treatment to try to repair the damage caused through the removal of my jawbone.

"I will then perhaps finance a business for my husband."

Her husband, Joseph H. Bennett, has been unemployed for some time.

"If these intentions are not too expensive, I will use the remaining amount to purchase a home of our own and to educate my children," she said.

Mrs. Bennett has four children, Dorothy, 9, Lorraine 7, Francis 5 and William 3.

The board [illegible] granted the permit for the [illegible] plant and slaughtering [illegible] by a vote of two to one, with Dr. Clement F. [illegible] in the minority.

1000 JOBS PROMISED

Dr. [illegible] in an open letter [illegible] considered that people should have more information on the matter and he declared that nothing had been said about establishing stockyards at the plant for shipping upwards of 5000 head of cattle from the West into Malden annually.

Residents of the Edgeworth section of Malden, where the plant would be located, sought more information, with the result that City Solicitor Brown was called into the discussion.

The proposed packing company has been incorporated as the Malden Products Company and representatives informed the board of health that between 1000 and 1500 men would be given employment.

FLOYD GIBBONS FEELS FOE'S LEAD AND LOSES AN EYE

GIBBONS FAILED TO THROW HIMSELF DOWN SOON ENOUGH AND THE LEADEN HAIL FROM THE GERMAN MACHINE GUN RIPPED OUT HIS LEFT EYE AND DRILLED HIS LEFT ARM.

FLOYD GIBBONS ATTENDED BY HIS WIFE IN HOSPITAL AT NEUILLY.

FLOYD GIBBONS

The U. S. marines stopped the Germans in Belleau Woods, near Chateau Thierry, after fierce fighting in the open. Floyd Gibbons, accompanied by St. Arthur Hartzell of the censor's staff, went forward to seek battalion headquarters. They were crossing an open field when a German machine gun let loose and Hartzell threw himself down, but Floyd wasn't quick enough. He lost his left eye and was drilled through the left arm. At the American Hospital at Neuilly, near Paris, Floyd was nursed back to health by his wife, and, while convalescing, he wrote his first book, "They Thought We Wouldn't Fight."

GIBBONS' LIFE OF THRILLS HUNTING HEADLINES

Editor's Note — Following is the fifth of a series of stories giving the "high lights" of the colorful and interesting career of Floyd Gibbons, now "covering" the Sino-Japanese situation at Shanghai for clients of International News Service. The stories are written by Henry Wales, himself a famous war correspondent and a "buddy" of Gibbons for a great many years.

Previous chapters have told of Mr. Gibbons' start as a reporter and how his mother aided him and have revealed some of his earlier hair-raising experiences, first in the "One Man War" then with Villa and later with Pershing in Mexico. We find him now in France with Gen. Pershing and the A. E. F. Now go on with the story.)

By HENRY WALES

CHAPTER V

After Gen. Pershing's arrival in France there was a lull in American activities, while the First and Second Divisions were being taken over and established in their training quarters in the Gondrecourt area prior to going into the line.

The General established his headquarters at Chaumont, not far away. As the time approached when the nucleus of the A. E. F. would be formed American press headquarters were opened at Neufchateau nearby.

At Neufchateau, Floyd Gibbons lived in an abandoned brewery with another correspondent. The army provided automobiles for the accredited correspondents, with sergeants as chauffeurs. Unlike the British, Belgian, French, Italian and German armies, the A. E. F. permitted the newspapermen to go anywhere they chose along the front, unaccompanied by officers.

Gibbons stuck with the First [illegible] in the line near Luneville [illegible] in the Woevre in front of Toul. After the mighty German drive in March 1918 he went to Beauvais, where a couple of years ago the British dirigible R101 crashed, for the American counter attack at Cantigny.

Call for Yanks
As Germans Thrust on Toward Paris

He rushed north to the British front afterward to cover the hammer blows of Hindenburg against Mont Kemmel and the [illegible] against Ypres for the channel ports. Then the terrific enemy attack against the Chemin des Dames on March 2? called him to that sector.

Sweeping through in a [illegible] surprise attack, the Germans crushed everything before them, killing, wounding, capturing [illegible] the two British divisions and the French holding the line. Swinging southward, they crossed the Aisne, captured Soissons, swept further and crossed the Vesle, then the Ourcq and finally debouched on the Marne, taking Chateau Thierry.

On the Marne the German attack wheeled westward. Right astride the main highway to Paris, it started for the capital. There was no opposition before the Germans. The British force was pulverized, the French were scattered.

Marshal Foch called on Pershing for aid. He sent the nearest troops he had, the Second Division, out of the line "resting" after a long period in the trenches south of Verdun.

The Second Division was rushed to the Marne in motor trucks and [illegible]

Marines Stop 'Em
In Furious Battle in Belleau Wood

The main German attack kept to the higher ground, away from the river, which is why the brunt of its force fell on the Marines. They clinched in Belleau Wood, five or six miles from Chateau Thierry. There the Marines stopped them.

It was a dog fight. No trenches, no barbed wire; virgin soil; only galloped over by the Uhlans in August 1914 before the first battle of the Marne.

With his eyeball hanging down on his cheek [illegible] Gibbons lay for more than six hours in that wheat field. Every time he or Hartzell attempted to move [illegible] the German gunners opened [illegible] [illegible]

By 9 p. m. it was dark enough to begin to move [illegible] They crawled [illegible] and then Hartzell helped Gibbons to a [illegible] dressing station. wrote his first book "They Thought We Wouldn't Fight." Later he made a lecture tour over the United States.

[illegible] before Christmas, 1918, a few weeks after the Armistice and [illegible] the peace conference was about to be opened, Gibbons returned to Paris to organize a foreign staff for his new paper.

The American army of occupation [illegible] were still on the Rhine with headquarters in Coblenz. Hundreds of thousands of doughboys were waiting repatriation in French ports. Transports were [illegible] shipping was [illegible]

Here's a sure way to chase them

● Woman's work is never done—especially dishes. No wonder so many women get those dishpan blues. But here, at last, is a wonderful new soap discovery that chases away the gloom that hovers over dishpans. Its name is Oxydol — it is a new-type soap that makes 50% more suds—richer, speedier suds that scoot away the grease from dishes almost like magic. In a flash they're gleaming bright—with no trace of clinging film.

And Oxydol is kind to hands because it's a safe soap — and it works so fast that your hands needn't linger in the dishwater. No matter how hard or soft the water, you'll get the same rich extra suds with New Oxydol. It's suds that get things clean, so remember whenever you buy soap that it's SUDS, not soap, you really pay for. Oxydol is the greatest suds-bargain ever.

Works wonders in washtub too

Oxydol's extra suds save time and work on washday. They SOAK clothes whiter and cleaner than weak, old-type watery suds can ever get them — even though you rub and scrub your life away.

Ask your grocer today for Oxydol, in the orange and blue suds-bargain package.

At the [illegible] the detail from headquarters. In charge of the party was Lieut. Fallon of Colt's personal staff, with Detectives Langley and Schwartz and a group of lesser known men with one of our operatives, Dorothy Lox, an ample, hearty [illegible] to Colt in the Chinatown seven [illegible]

As [illegible] he reported.

"I got the building plans from the office downstairs—they think it's a burglar scare. We can guard every window and door of the penthouse, except the ones that open on a sheer drop to the street, with plenty of men for the terrace and roof—and you can use Miss Lox inside."

"Let me see the layout."

The chief studied the paper [illegible] floor plans of the penthouse.

"Very good," he said, after a moment. "Let's go!"

[illegible] Colt rang [illegible] apartment bell. Fallon saluted and nodded toward the other detectives who scattered toward the places assigned to them. All approaches to the penthouse were now under heavy police guard.

The door was opened by a [illegible] Chinaman with a [illegible] bald head and a face [illegible] homely. The servant was wearing a house-robe of [illegible] loose-flowing [illegible] with a rope sash and ornamented with a pattern of dragons wrought in golden thread. Rich apparel for a man servant. He was a bizarre apparition on our first encounter with Lola Carewe's singular household. I wondered if Colt would [illegible] him with a [illegible] Standing [illegible] hands [illegible] large head [illegible] waving from side to side [illegible] finally.

"A happy new year to you, madame, after the custom of the 48 states of this independent country."

"Thanks, Chung!"

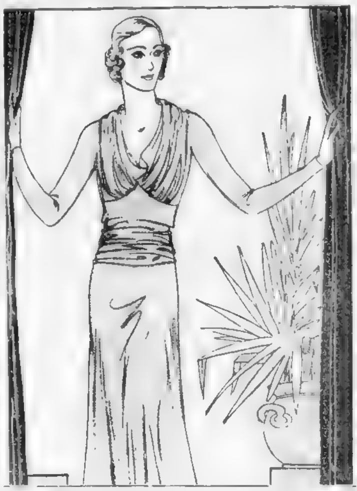
The mistress of the penthouse seemed to accept her [illegible] and salutation a [illegible] greeting. I wondered if he pattered around these rooms all day long making [illegible] speeches [illegible] was [illegible]

What does the commissioner find on the mantel in Lola's apartment? Another thrill in tomorrow's installment.

A VIONNET SUGGESTION

Features a Cowl-Draped Bodice

—SKETCHED IN PARIS—



To give a fair idea of the allure that will prevail in sartorial circles this Spring we are showing the Vionnet frock of pastel blue crepe marocain, featuring a cowl-draped bodice and a seamless shoulder line.

Chivalry of Past and Present

By ELSIE ROBINSON.

A BUNCH of youngsters started this. They want to know what is a perfect gentleman.

Yes, you've guessed it. They have decided that one of their number ISN'T. Why?

Because the big rough-neck won't take off his hat when there is a lady in the elevator; won't give up his seat to a lady in the street car and constantly commits other misdemeanors of a like, ungallant nature. Therefore, say the girls, he ISN'T a gentleman.

But the young man persists that they are all wrong. Such gestures, he protests, are not the test of a gentleness. Maybe they were the whipped cream-dressing once, but they're not necessary now. And won't I tell the girl friend they aren't?

So there you have the makings of a [illegible] row. When is and when ISN'T a gentleman? And is a [illegible] gentleman the same breed of cat as the gentleman of the old school?

Obviously he isn't. But that does not necessarily mean that the prize bottle of hair oil should go to the chivalrous Charlies of yesteryear. Granted, their manners were lovely. But I doubt me much if their motives were sincere!

Consider this little matter of taking off one's hat to a lady. How did it start? Very prettily. The assumption was that, the lady being of finer clay, she should be treated with reverence.

Consider Maryland my Maryland. Was there ever a state that boasted more of her chivalry than Maryland? Were ever gents more gentlemanly than on her rose-embowered acres? Never!

Yet, while insisting that a gentleman does everything but turn a back somersault at the sight of a lady, this state also granted him the right to beat her with a stick, provided it be "no thicker through than his thumb", and though it made a gallant hullabaloo against divorce, it also ruled that husband might support his mistress under the same roof with the wife, and his missis couldn't do a thing about it.

Then if that is the way men really feel about women, why all the beautiful manners? Because they were part of the racket—a social anaesthetic as it were, which so dizzied the lady she ceased to fuss about her real condition.

There is no more reason why a man should take off his hat to a woman than there is why a woman should take off her hat to a man. Women are of no finer clay than men, no more sensitive or helpless.

And "a perfect gentleman" is simply an honest, kindly, sensible person who treats ALL humans regardless of sex with fairness and friendliness.

Daily True Story

Double Reward

LEILA MERRITT liked her job in the bank even though the bank was in a small town in a country district. She had a flair for figures and the cashier who had dispensed money for years from behind the grille [illegible] declared she was a better accountant than any of the officers.

No one would have called her good looking, but there was something about her that inspired confidence, something that [illegible] Hartley described as the charm that grows. And he had plenty of time to make [illegible] for they had grown up [illegible] he was waiting [illegible]

He took Leila for granted [illegible] they were [illegible] January [illegible] New Year's Day.

WHEN CHARLIE CAME

But that was before [illegible] Castle came to town. Charlie was different from the [illegible] Bondsville boys. He dressed better, his manners were perfect, his English was a delight. No wonder Leila was swept off her feet.

No wonder [illegible] with a [illegible] Charlie [illegible]

Tony protested [illegible] "I told you you might wait too long," she reminded him, "not that I like you any the less—remember that, won't you, Tony?"

Charlie had an account at the bank and dropped in often to talk to Leila so much so that the [illegible] about it. "He'll be asking you the combination of the safe next," he laughed.

And that's just what Charlie did, very unexpectedly [illegible] when Leila was [illegible] Charlie came in [illegible] drew Leila into [illegible]

"I'm in great trouble, my dear," he said. "I need about $20,000 till tomorrow night. I've simply got to have it at once."

"Twenty thousand dollars," echoed Leila. "But where can you get a big sum like that?"

"Right here," said Charlie. "You can lend it to me tomorrow afternoon. I can give it back, I could get it from New York, but I can't wait. You see, I've discovered oil. I've got to have the cash to buy up options. You'll help me, won't you?"

[illegible] in his [illegible]

"See here, Leila," he said, "we won't go anywhere—I've got to have that cash and you've got to open the safe for me."

"Why, Charlie," protested Leila, "are you crazy? I don't even know the combination."

"That's a lie," said Charlie. [illegible] went into his pocket [illegible] a small [illegible]

LOCKED IN THE SAFE

[illegible] swing open. It was a [illegible] There," she whispered. "It's in there, way in." Charlie almost stepped inside. "Way back in that drawer," said Leila.

And then with a suddenness he was [illegible] unprepared for [illegible] all her strength, [illegible] him inside and swung the door to.

Then she telephoned to Tony. "Come down at once," she said, "and bring Mr. Collins and a couple of policemen—I've got him at last."

A [illegible] Tony and Leila were on a train bound for [illegible] "By George," said Tony, "who'd ever have thought that fellow was a big time crook."

"I did, I suspected it all the time," said Leila, "from the day he came to town, and I waited—I didn't expect a $5000 reward—but I did expect you'd stop telling me to wait a couple of years."

Here is the AMAZING NEW SUCCESSOR TO WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

NOTE this loaf carefully, please! Note the distinctive wrapper. This is Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread, the bread that has won thousands from tasteless whole wheat bread. This is the bread that is made with the famous Balanced-Blend. You'll always find it in this brown and green wrapper at your nearest grocer's.

Balanced-Blend makes Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread actually taste like cake. What is Balanced-Blend? Just this: The right proportion of genuine stone-ground whole wheat flour, blended with the right proportion of choice short-patent flour. An amazing discovery. And it has created an amazing bread.

You can eat Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread for one good reason: because it's the best tasting bread in town. But be sure you get genuine Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread. Remember the wrapper! Remember the name—Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread!

LOOK FOR THE BROWN AND GREEN WRAPPER ON EVERY LOAF

LIKE WHITE BREAD? [Just as Wonder-Cut Wheat Bread is far better in every way than ordinary whole wheat bread, so is white Wonder-Cut Bread far superior in every way to ordinary white bread. That is why more people serve it than any other kind.] LOOK!

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

To a Would-Be Wag:

How soothing to converse with pleasant pals,
While nightclub jazzbands toot their madrigals:
On life, on art, and literature to chat,
Or to philosophize on this and that
Nice to be with the understanding [illegible]
Until your tiresome carcass heaves in view!

Then, as you slump into a vacant chair,
Congenial pleasure turns to black despair
At once you start to entertain the folk,
With dull cliches and mossy vaudeville jokes
The conversation dies, and how we rue
Laws which forbid us making you die too!

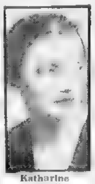
By NICHOLAS YOUNG

As everyone who reads the papers knows, right well, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," first tipped New York on its ears and then retired from Broadway with protests of a Great City ringing in its ears. There was no need for its departure; it was the season's glistening gem, as things go in the theater. For nearly a year, and up to its final week on Manhattan's brightly lighted lanes, it was the playgoer's delight and the speculator's best guarantee against lean and hungry days.

• • •

This is mentioned casually because Miss Katharine Cornell in rare wisdom, chose to make Boston her first port of call while cruising the hinterlands. And so, having been prepared for something brighter and better the big audience at the Shubert last evening comfortably settled itself into cushioned chairs and proceeded to enjoy the drama with splendid enthusiasm. The merits of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" having already been [illegible] the [illegible] of any [illegible] of [illegible] But the [illegible] whether the actor makes the play, or whether the play makes things easier for the player. In this grim family revelation Miss Cornell replied to the question in her own way. She became at least three-quarters of the large Barrett family before you had fairly scratched through its surface.



Katharine Cornell

Miss Cornell, of course, gave a capital performance. That was expected and there was no disappointment. With some liberties [illegible] the narrative took up the romance of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning, a sort of literary courtship, hemmed in on all sides by parental opposition that was little less than insane in its measures. The poets had a hard time of it on Wimpole st. It is doubtful if any other among our talented women of the theater could have bestowed upon [illegible] the [illegible] that Miss Cornell [illegible] Her task was prodigious. On the stage continuously from curtain to curtain there was no opportunity for relaxation, only hard wearisome acting for three full hours. The task was fulfilled to the last syllable to her final gesture.

Throughout the play as the complications multiplied in this unnatural Barrett household you could feel yourself gripped and held by its intensity. There was hardly a moment when dramatic suspense in one form or another, did not lay cold hands upon the audience. Upon one hand was the suppressed emotion of Miss Cornell upon the other was the ferocious brutality of the father, played magnificently by Charles Waldron. And then came all the other Barretts, each with his own problem and each of them out of touch with father. It was a house of tyranny with nine docile grown-up children [illegible] submissive if you can believe it.

• • •

By virtue of its presentation "The Barretts of Wimpole" became satisfying drama. Miss Cornell's contribution alone was enough to exact passionate enthusiasm. Mr. Waldron whose role was beset with many difficulties proved more than fit for the night's job. Brian Aherne played Robert Browning [illegible] and boisterously. Margalo Gillmore was [illegible] another unhappy Barrett and [illegible] the [illegible] end.

Taken every test "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" made up an interesting family. If the home affairs were badly handled there was no question of their heart-tugging qualities. And out of it all emerged the theater's best romance of many years.

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

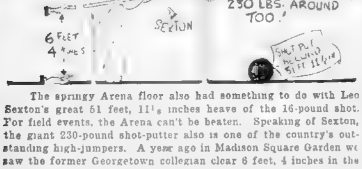
Blizzard Still Rages. — Leo Sexton Versatile.
More Record Wrecking. — Giant Leaps 6 Ft. 4 In.
Jumping George Spitz. — Venzke Races Lermond.

Wonder If the Boys Ever Are Going to Stop?

Father Time and the Record Book better reef all sail and lash things down for the Big Atlantic Blizzard of '32 still is raging. The hurricane started a week ago and the barometer hints it is increasing, not abating. The cream of the country's athletes, assembled on the Atlantic seaboard for the big Eastern meets, have struck the top of their form. Competition has whetted their blades to record wrecking sharpness. With the New York A. C. games tomorrow, the Meadowbrook Club meet on the week end and the national indoor championships next Monday, the peak of the blizzard will [illegible] records will be found in its wake. Jumping George Spitz is [illegible] for at least another inch. Leo Sexton and Herman Brix [illegible] closer to [illegible] feet with every heave of the 16-pound shot. Gene Venzke at any time is likely to step a mile in [illegible] with Leo Lermond either a stride behind—or maybe up in front. We're living in parlous times, mates. Ye gods and little fishes, 6 feet, 8½ in the high jump, 4:11 2-5 in the mile, 51 feet, 11⅛ inches indoors with the shot—shades of Mike Sweeney, Tommy Conneff and Ralph Rose! When are the boys ever going to stop?

"Spitz good for at least another inch in the high jump?" we hear someone query. You bet. And perhaps, before he quits, even more. George hasn't reached his ceiling yet. Those who know their athletic onions and watched the lad in his record-wrecking jump at the B. A. A. meet at the Arena last week, noticed that George got body, head and legs over the crossbar at 6 feet, 9 inches, but nicked the stick off with his dangling arm. He cleared the bar with daylight to spare, but when coming down failed to raise his arm and knocked the bar off. Sooner or later this second and modern edition of Mike Sweeney is going to get over 6 feet 9 inches—and higher—left elbow and all.

We'd like to see Spitz jump in the Arena again. His chances for putting the record where no one ever will touch it—yet didn't we say the same thing when we saw Mike Sweeney jump 6 feet 5⅝ inches a quarter of a century ago?—are better in the Boston Arena than in Madison Sq. Garden, New York. The Arena track, narrow, sharp-turned, far from rightly banked, cannot compare with the Boston Garden or Madison Sq. Garden tracks. But the old Arena flooring is springier, vastly better for the jumpers. Spitz "liked" the Arena floor. He'll jump higher on it than he will on smoother, firmer surfaces.

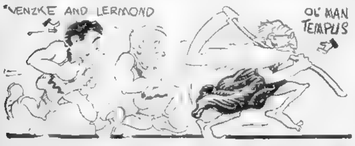


"BELIEVE IT OR NOT!"—
HE CAN TOSS HIS OWN 230 LBS. AROUND TOO!
SEXTON
6 FEET 4 INCHES
SHOT PUT HE CLEARED 51 FT 11⅛ IN

The springy Arena floor also had something to do with Leo Sexton's great 51 feet, 11⅛ inches heave of the 16-pound shot. For field events, the Arena can't be beaten. Speaking of Sexton, the giant 230-pound shot-putter also is one of the country's outstanding high-jumpers. A year ago in Madison Square Garden we saw the former Georgetown collegian clear 6 feet, 4 inches in the high jump. Just think of a big 230-pound fellow clearing more than six feet in the running high jump. That is one for the book. As Ripley says, believe it or not! With his New York A. C. club mate, Georgie Spitz, leaping 6 feet, 8½ inches in the high jump it looks as if Leo used good judgment in deciding to leave the high jump to Georgie and himself to concentrate on the shotput.

If any shot-putter is to pass the sought-for 53-foot mark—Eric Hirshfeld, of Germany, with 52 feet, 7½ inches, has come closest to it—we believe Sexton is the man. He is just reaching top shot-putting form. His best years, like those of Spitz, seem in front of him. For a while it is likely to be a tossup between Sexton and Brix. But the Eastern youth is likely to improve more than the Californian and gradually wear away from him. Last Saturday night Brix was "licked" by Sexton's record-wrecking heave. The weight men are a nervous, shaky lot, easily thrown out of gear. Sexton's record-wrecking heave jolted Brix all out of form. Try as he might, Herman couldn't seem to "get together," and get his shoulder rightly behind the shot. Most of the shot-putters are "front runners," shaky, scary, easily jolted from mental and competitive poise.

Martin Sheridan and Bill Coe were about the only real "nervy" weight men we ever knew. All the other giants were alibi hunters. All were eternally afraid of being beaten. Pat McDonald, Matt McGrath, Jim Mitchell, John Flanagan always claiming strained backs, swollen knees or something or other before a competition. "Bedad, I didn't sleep a wink last night because of the pain in me back," Flanagan would groan. "Sure, and I won't be able to toss the hammer the length o' me arm!" And then John would go out and smash a world's record!



What is going to happen when Gene Venzke and Leo Lermond come tearing down at the tape in the Baxter Mile tomorrow night? Will the loser chase the winner across the line in record time? Perhaps. But generally when as great a field of runners meet as will go to the post tomorrow night, there is considerable jockeying and maneuvering for pace and position. They are out to beat each other, not Father Time. Sometimes a pair or trio will watch each other so closely that an outsider catches 'em napping. Such was the case in the 1500-meter event in the Stockholm Olympics when Arnold Jackson, of England, sneaked by Abel Kiviat, Mel Sheppard and John Paul Jones. But if Venzke and Lermond both don't wreck the mile record tomorrow night they'll both come so close to it there'll be no fun in it. A great mile pair, Gene and Leo. How we'd like to be there when the gun barks tomorrow night!

If Day is given a match penalty to be served tonight the Leafs will be weakened noticeably, for the veteran defense man has always played spectacular hockey here.

Cubs Beat Indians 4-1 in Peaceful Game

Followers of the battling Bruin Cubs were startled as their favorites scalped the Springfield Indians at the Garden, 4 to 1, in a Can-Am game which produced not even one fight.

The game was a bit slower than many of the Cubs' efforts, but the main topic of conversation following the fray was the absence of warfare.

Walker-Londos Bout Sanctioned

St. Louis, Feb. 16 (INS)—The Missouri Boxing Commission has sanctioned the proposed mixed match between Mickey Walker, former welterweight and middleweight boxing champion, and Jimmy Londos, wrestling title claimant, Seneca C. Taylor, State boxing commissioner, said today.

Londos has not accepted the match as yet. Jack Kearns, manager of Walker, already has approved the match.

Hafey Reads 'Cards,' Throws Away Hand

San Francisco, Feb. 1 (INS)—Charles Chick Hafey has returned his contract unsigned to the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals, he said today.

Joe Cronin admitted here that his trouble with Washington had been patched and he was ready to sign.

WHAT THEY DO WHEN OFF THE DIAMOND

TOM JENKINS, outfielder of the St. Louis Browns, spends a good part of the winter in his home here in Norfolk Downs, in between Neponset and Quincy, playing with his son BOBBIE, as you see in the picture. Tom is an Alabaman, but he married a Roxbury girl—the former Rita Graham—and became a confirmed Bay Stater. MARVIN OLSON, Red Sox second sacker, whom you see among his wolf hounds, spends the winters hunting wolves and coyotes on his farm in Gayville, South Dakota. He and his brother, Ernest, of the Buffalo Internationals, have had a big bag this winter. Besides the pelts they get a fair sized bounty on wolves. Marvin plays basketball with the Gayville Independents.

Mound Weakness Sent Shires to 1st Base

This is the ninth of a series of highlights in the career of Arthur the Great Shires, colorful new first baseman of the Braves, written by Joe Cashman, baseball expert of the Boston Evening American. Other instalments will follow daily. Watch for them!

By JOE CASHMAN

The hooks, speed and change of pace which carried Art Shires to 68 straight college victories couldn't get anybody out when he joined the Waco club of the Texas League.

This convinced C. Arthur—he had gone back to his original name again—that he couldn't advance very far in his chosen profession if he stayed on the mound.

[illegible] he went after a [illegible] and eventually landed on first base.

One game at the initial bag satisfied both him and his manager that this was his natural berth. And for the next three seasons, his work around that bag was the talk of the Lone Star circuit.

So were his actions. He was ever telling the spectators what a great player he was and advising them to watch him as often as possible because before very long he would be leaving to show the big league guys how first base should be played!

Art Always Ready to Battle Fans

Occasionally a fan would resent this young man's attitude and give him the "razz." Whereupon Art would climb right up into the stands and slap the offender down. Players who restorted to the same tactics, and several did, were given a dose of the same medicine.

Art didn't hit so well in '26, his first season at Waco. He found the Texas [illegible] much [illegible] from the college brand and when the averages were computed [illegible] was only [illegible] within 25 points of being enough to make any major league scout even contemplate a trip to look over Waco's first sacker. In fact, the young man was informed that unless he did considerably better with the stick the following season, he would be on his way down the baseball ladder.

He wisely took the tip, got in a lot of batting practice around Italy that winter and returned to Waco to hit .345 for the 1927 campaign.

Even that mark didn't excite any of the ivory hunters. But his .317 average [illegible] his boasts and his color [illegible] touched the ears of White Sox scouts shortly before Labor Day in '28, and he was promptly added to the Chicago roster.

Back in the big leagues tomorrow.

SPORT SCRIBES PRAISE JACK

Flint, Mich., Feb. 16 (INS)—Jack Dempsey's two knockouts today over two more opponents studding his trail from comeback land—the opponents were not so important as the manner in which he disposed of them before 7000 people here last night.

Veteran sport writers of this section who saw Dempsey in his prime confessed themselves amazed at his old-time power apparently undiminished again. Again that powerful left lashed out to bring the former world's heavyweight champion victory.

"His left looks as good as ever and his right has been developed," Frank MacGonnell, boxing expert of the Detroit Times,' said. "Jack weaved in like he used to fight and he blocked well."

"Dempsey still has a great punch," Sam Greene, long time boxing writer for the Detroit News, said. "He will make it interesting for any fighter today."

Dempsey last night first knocked out George Kohler of Chicago and Pat McLoughlin, Waupaca, Wis., in a round apiece.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

WHAT IS pari-mutuel betting?

The lawmakers are asking this question now that the racing bill has been placed in their laps.

I am glad to enlighten the noble senators and honorable reps. Of course I first called upon Gus Daly who has been following racing as man and boy for these many years. Enough to say that Gus ran a mutuel machine (the only one) at The Country Club in Brookline [illegible] years ago. I also refreshed my memory on the way I used to buy those $2 tickets at Bowie, Pimlico, Churchill Downs and New Orleans.

Mr. Boston

Pari-mutuel machines assure everybody of a fair deal. There isn't anything tricky or crooked about them. They are as much on the level as a fine summer's day.

NOW FOR THE pari-mutuel system. You parade into a race track, take a peek at the entries, listen to a lot of fellows who think they know all about the various horses and then make your selection. I always enjoy a race of any kind better when I have a financial interest, usually $2 on the outcome.

You walk over to the pari-mutuel machines and decide whether you want to bet on your selection to win, place or show. Place means to finish second, show to finish third.

We'll say you want to take a chance your horse wins. You buy a ticket that your selection wins. As soon as you make your purchase one of the operators of the pari-mutuel machines presses a lever which rings a bell and sends figures shooting into a slot which informs other bettors that you have invested $2 that a certain horse wins.

Other race track followers may bet on other horses. Of course they all don't bet on their selections to win. They may buy place or show tickets. But no matter how they wage their money, a big board adjoining the pari-mutuel machines registers the amount of money up on each horse and whether the jack is wagered for the horse to win, place or show.

No chance for bookmakers to do a job on the cash customer by such a system. Everything is out in the open.

They have an electric buzzer from the starter's post to the pari-mutuel machines. The second the barrier drops the buzzer sounds, and the windows of the pari-mutuel machines close.

John Macomber

In the old days before the racing stewards were so strict and before they had electric buzzers, the wise boys used to try to see which horse got away from the barrier first, flash word back to an operator near the pari-mutuel machine and buy a ticket on the leading horse before the machine closed. Nowadays, with electric buzzers and a million or so detectives around the tracks, such practices are not tolerated.

WE'LL SAY $10,000 worth of $2 tickets were sold on the race on which you made your $2 investment. And to make this illustration more interesting we'll say your horse won.

The state first takes its percentage of the amount bet. This usually [illegible] around 3 per cent. Maryland, Kentucky, Louisiana, Illinois and Ohio have all legalized pari-mutuel betting. The organization conducting the race meeting is also allowed a percentage. We'll say this cut amounts to 7 per cent. This leaves $9000 to be divided among the holders of tickets on the winning horse.

Of the money in the pari-mutuel machine after the 10 per cent deduction, $4000 was wagered on the nose, $3000 to place and $2000 to show. There are we'll say, 400 first place tickets. These lucky ones divide the $4000 and so get $10 for each $2 invested. The same system is used in cutting up the place and show money.

In other words under the pari-mutuel system, all the money wagered comes back to the bettors other than the percentages that go to the state and racing association.

IF A HORSE pays $250 for a $2 ticket, you collect that amount of money. If you had placed the same bet with a bookmaker in Newspaper Row, you would only be paid off at odds of 15 to 1. That's the bookmaker's limit.

'BUNK,' SAYS MINNESOTA MENTOR

New York, Feb. 16 (AP) Generally speaking, the official reaction to the changes made in the playing code by the national football rules committee has been favorable, but there have been dissenters enough to make the debate interesting.

Elmer Layden of Duquesne, declared the rule which forbids a player on the defense to strike a rival on the head or face with his hands "will eliminate the use of small players," and called it "simply protection for the big boys."

He was joined in that stand by three other former Notre Dame-trained coaches, Tommy Mills of Georgetown, Rip Miller of Navy, and Edward (Slip) Madigan of St. Mary's of Oakland, and by Bill Ingram of California.

Harvey Harman of Penn, thought the penalty for violation of this rule (disqualification of the player and loss of half the distance to the offending team's goal line) was so severe that officials would be chary of calling it.

Layden also opposed the change in the kickoff rule which permits the kickoff to be made with punt or drop-kick as well as place-kick, declaring it will have a "tendency to make teams punt the ball short and high to regain possession of it, exposing the receiver to severe injuries."

Jack Elder, former Notre Dame halfback, agreed with Layden for the same reason and Dick Hanley of Northwestern added that the rule will "give the team with a good punter too great an advantage."

Warner Attacks "Dead Ball" Rule

Glenn S. (Pop) Warner of Stanford favored all the regulations except that calling for an automatic "dead" ball when any part of the ball carrier's body, except his hands or feet, touches the ground. He pointed out that a ball carrier could outdistance all opposition in a dash to the goal line and still lose a touchdown should he happen to slip or fall.

Hanley thought the "dead" ball rule would "destroy the mark that distinguishes a great player from a mediocre one." Gwinn Henry, coach, and C. L. Brewer, athletic director of Missouri, objected to the rule on the grounds that it destroyed one of the most spectacular features of the game. Mills took the same position.

On the other hand, Bernie Bierman of Minnesota, who branded the rule changes "mostly a bunch of bunk," thought the "dead" ball rule was a good one. "It's one place," he said, "where they've got at the cause of accidents."

Elimination of the flying block or flying tackle will handicap the little player, Hanley thought, and J. J. Lipp, a Big Ten official, said it was "going to be hard to call" a violation of this rule. Clark Shaughnessy of Loyola, of the South, favored elimination of the flying tackle, but he thought the flying block was the smaller player's best weapon.

Several coaches and athletic directors, including H. O. (Fritz) Crisler of Minnesota, Bob Zuppke of Illinois and Hanley, warned the new rules would present additional problems for the officials.

CLOSED BANK CRIPPLES MEDFORD ATHLETICS

BOYS ASKED TO FINANCE SPORTS

The boys at Medford High School might not have a single penny tied up in the closed Medford Trust Company, but they are going to feel the pinch as much as the poorest depositor.

[illegible] and dollar belonging to the Medford High Athletic Association are frozen up with the rest of the Trust Company's assets, there is no money available for track and baseball.

Ralph I. Kendall [illegible]

Kendall [illegible] that the [illegible] on the track and baseball [illegible] furnish their own equipment or else schedule all their events away from home.

As quite a few of the boys at Medford high are the sons of depositors in the Medford Trust, it is hard to see how they will be able to finance their own track and baseball teams.

One hope remains, however, that the necessary funds can be raised. Medford and Melrose are tied for the interscholastic hockey championship. If a playoff can be arranged at the Garden or the Arena it is [illegible] that enough money can be realized to finance [illegible] and baseball.

Kendall has [illegible] that in the event the baseball team is unable to complete a satisfactory schedule away from home, that intramural games take the place of the regular schedule.

At present the Medford high field and field house at Fulton st. will be kept closed in order to conserve whatever money remains in the athletic treasury. A committee has been appointed to confer with the Melrose authorities to see if a hockey playoff can be arranged.

VILLA STOPS RENAULT

By JACK CONWAY

Even a stout-hearted scrapper like Baby Jack Renault of Cambridge cannot expect to get very far in a bout where he only has the use of one eye.

Renault would have continued battling with only the assistance of one optic if given his own way, but Referee Eddie McDonald of Brockton thought otherwise and declared Pancho Villa of New Bedford the winner on a technical knockout after 1m. 10s. of batting in the ninth round at the Arena.

Villa had a commanding lead when ordered to cease firing. In fact, Pancho was well out in front before Renault received an injury to his left eye in the sixth round of the Argonne A. A. mill.

Bobby Mays of New Bedford came up off the floor to win from Nap Proulx of Taunton in their 10-round bout. Proulx tipped Mays over with a right to the head in the second round. Mays was lucky to last out the round.

The New Bedford youngster then got down to business and came galloping down the home stretch. The decision in favor of Mays was unanimous, but it didn't meet with the approval of the 3000 or so cash customers. They felt Proulx was entitled to the nod.

Incidentally, Eddie McDonald of Brockton refereed the two 10-rounders. He did a good job. Dan Kelly, new boxing commissioner, intends to give all the out-of-towners an opportunity to prove what they can do in contests in the Hub.

Frank Bowman of Lynn and Jim Shaunnessy of this city were the judges.

Joe Delmont of Roxbury won the decision over Johnny Walker of East Boston in a four-rounder. Tony Aquaro of Lynn upset Chris DeRosa of East Boston in another four.

Patsy Pacino of Roxbury stopped Willie Miller of Dorchester in two heats. Give the credit to a couple of left hooks to the jaw.

Eno Nieholm of Maynard stopped Andre Chapdelaine in three sessions.

Leo Larrivee, Waterbury middleweight, has been signed to appear at an Argonne Club show a week from next Monday night.

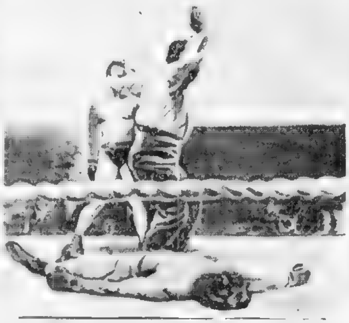
When Papke Knocked Out Kelly in One Round

THE FINISH OF HUGO KELLY



This series of Finishes of Old Time Fights is an exclusive feature of the sport pages of the Boston Evening American. To-day [illegible] Billy Papke knocked out Hugo Kelly [illegible] at Colma, [illegible] May 1 [illegible]

By W. S FARNSWORTH

It took Billy Papke one second less than a half round to stretch Hugo Kelly on the canvas at Coffroth's ring at Colma.

At the bell Papke rushed into action, pouring out punches and [illegible] strong as a bull. Kelly was taken by surprise and, instead [illegible] with his own, attempted to smother the onslaught by clinching.

Papke was not to be [illegible]. By sheer strength he wrenched himself [illegible] and rushed his foe to the [illegible] bending his body halfway out of the ring with the savagery of [illegible]

[illegible]

Papke lost no time in following up his advantage. As Kelly's head sank Billy unleashed a withering fire of right and left uppercuts on the unprotected chin of his foe. Four stinging punches, two from each hand, found the mark and then Papke stepped back as Kelly slowly slumped to the canvas.

Kelly [illegible] and then was motionless until the count hit [illegible]. At eight he jumped [illegible]. At nine he was up but he was heavy eyed [illegible]

Papke, who had stood quietly to one side while the count was going on, went at his man savagely. Kelly lurched forward and tried to clinch, but it was no use. Papke shouldered him away and again drove rights and lefts to the Chicago fighter's head.

Down went Kelly and this time to stay. He fell heavily, settled on his back and flung his arms out. He was dead to his surroundings as the referee and timekeeper tolled off the ten count in unison. There was never a quiver of a muscle as the fatal ten was counted over him.

[illegible]

Hughes picked himself up and as he went by the big defenseman Leo whipped his feet out from under him. Still, Leo did not feel that he had squared accounts for the next time he went down he deliberately cut across to the Frenchman's side of the ice and hit him with everything he had.

On the last rush of the game, Hughes carried down and it was apparent to everyone that Dufresne was out to even matters up [illegible] the Arena player [illegible]

It looked bad for the Newton boy, for Dufresne was more experienced, but apparently Hughes guessed the Frenchman's intentions, for just as he was within a few feet of him he pushed the puck between Dufresne's skates and then beat him to the draw by cross checking him, forcibly resting his stick on his opponent's Adam's Apple.

As Dufresne slid into the net, the bell rang ending the game. The crowd gave Dufresne the W. K. Bronx cheer, but he was not sufficiently riled to try to settle his ill feeling against Hughes in the dressing room, and therefore lost considerable prestige.

'BEAR MARKET OVER,' SHOUTS WALL ST.

By B. C. Forbes

MONEY TALKS. The sudden sensational rise in the market value of securities and the substantial improvement in the price of commodities talk convincingly.

Upwards of ten billions of dollars—ten thousand millions—were added to the market worth of securities in seven hours. Commodities and raw materials bounded up in value several more billions.

The new week fortunately—opened less spectacularly. Movements were irregular and trading dull.

Future Weakness Should Be Rare

"The bear market is over!" is shouted in Wall Street.

While it would be rash to jump to the conclusion that there will be no more spasms of weakness, it is not likely that bears will again become as bold as they were before they had their fingers so badly burned.

Ups and downs—then up and up will be the general course hereafter.

Europe Envious of Dollar's Strength

How absurd for Europeans to pretend that they are afraid of the soundness of the American dollar.

The truth, which is not particularly palatable to envious Europeans, is that American currency is the best-secured and safest in the whole world. After the impending changes have been made in the banking law, U. S. currency will continue to be backed by no less than 40 per cent in gold. In addition, for every dollar issued there will be at least 60 per cent of the choicest securities in the world.

Seeing that nearly a billion and a half of currency has been withdrawn from circulation by hoarders throughout the country, it will take very great expansion in new currency to offset these buried sums.

There is not the slightest immediate danger that American currency will be "watered" one drop. Nor need there be serious apprehension that America's currency will become impaired in solidity one iota. As hoarded currency comes out of hiding, as it probably will from now on, the Federal Reserve Board unquestionably will take the proper action to prevent anything resembling actual inflation.

Hoarding No Longer Excusable

Talking of hoarding, President Hoover's campaign to [illegible] people into putting hoarded money back into banks is of extremely doubtful value. So long as small banks were popping like roasting popcorn, it wasn't reasonable to demand that nobody take precautionary measures. Didn't bank failures at the rate of over 40 a week explain hoarding in many places?

Now that machinery has been set up to prevent a single solvent bank from closing, excuse for hoarding should be promptly dispelled. In my humble opinion the tide has turned.

Rare Opportunity in Securities

Good securities have suffered along with others, suffered terrifically, ridiculously. The shares of the best companies even in our newer industries having unlimited prospects for growth and prosperity are today selling for only a fraction of their certain future worth. Take the electric industry. Who can doubt that it is in its infancy? America's leading electrical companies are spending millions on research which is bound to prove profitable. They have knit together capable organizations covering practically the whole world.

What an opportunity is presented today to those possessing investment funds—and vision!

That the corrective setback is being kept well in hand by market sponsors. A recession to around the closing prices of last Thursday is looked for. Disappointed Prophets

Those who promised inflation at the start of the year and have seen two developments that they thought would substantiate their views prove to be anything but inflation are now taking the rather stupid [illegible]. Whether this is stubbornness or not is hard to make out. However, brokers taking the above views are [illegible] they are wrong in expecting even a measure of inflation from an act that has only begun to be [illegible] to date. It is well to remember that proposed changes only allow for an increase in currency of slightly over $2,000,000,000. This is not considered a fair start toward inflation even if it were all issued, which it probably will not be.

Another factor which should be taken into consideration by those who feel currency expansion will furnish inflation, is the present store of hoarded money. It is nearly one-half of the proposed increase in currency. Naturally, as this money returns, bankers will be able to sell holdings or pay up their own loans, thus automatically reducing the new notes issued.

PROFIT-TAKING ABSORBED IN GOOD STYLE

That 4 per cent increase in shoe output in the United States, according to prevailing State Street opinion, can be definitely laid at the door of the protective tariff re-imposed after a lapse of many years. The tariff, which was fought for by Congressman Connery of Lynn and other New England leaders, has been accompanied by lower prices for shoes instead of higher, though opponents of the tariff mainly based their arguments on increased costs to the consumer.

Poultry industry is one of New England's most important. In a current magazine a jester tells of a "bright invention" featuring a hen with cellophane sides enabling us to tell the loafers from the layers. But Prof. Gowell of Maine about three decades ago developed the system poultrymen use to weed out the non-layers. This is the "trap nest." The laying hens, with their legs banded for identification, are held in the nests after laying until released by attendants and a perfect record is thus obtained of individual egg production.

Electric Sales of Gas Company Off

For the week ended February 6 Associated Gas & Electric System reports electric output, excluding sales to other utilities, of [illegible] k. w. h., a decrease of 1.5 per cent under the same week last year.

Gas output totaled 362,610,700 cubic feet, or 9.6 per cent below the same week in 1931. This is an improvement over the previous week when a decrease of 11.5 per cent was reported.

Standard Cap 1931 Net Equals $3.15

Standard Cap & Seal Corp. for the year 1931 reports a net profit of $648,366 after charges and Federal taxes, equal to $3.15 a share on [illegible] shares, as against $709,947 or $3.44 a share in 1930. Current assets as of December 31, 1931, including $315,917 cash, amounted to $1,194,685 and current liabilities were $185,407.

Kroger 1931 Net Tops Previous Year

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Excitement over the vigorous upturn in security and commodity prices has tended to obscure the sharp movement of foreign exchange against the dollar. This has been particularly true in the case of the French franc, which is above the point at which gold can be profitably exported out of the country. In this connection reports were to the effect that France would withdraw her gold or private balances from the United States within the next two weeks. The difficulties surrounding such a transfer, however, are the lack of available shipping facilities and the unwillingness of insurance organizations to [illegible] single risk exceeding $15,000,000.

Dividend Prospects of Gillette Given

Predictions are that Gillette Safety Razor will earn between $3 and $4 a share for the coming year and that the stock may receive a $1 dividend next June.

Texas Corporation Dividend Action Due

Yield of approximately 20 per cent on Texas Corporation common foreshadows another reduction in the dividend when directors meet shortly to discuss the question. The rate was lowered from $3 to $2 yearly last May. Semi-official estimates point to a distinctly unfavorable income report for the year 1931. Net is expected to show a material shrinkage from the 1930 equivalent of $1.53 a share. Financial position, however, will probably show little change in cash or its equivalent which amounted to $27,000,000 at the end of 1930, or more than 10 per cent of total current assets.

Prospects of Auto Lite Dividend Given

Next quarterly dividend of Electric Auto Lite is expected to be at the annual rate of $2.50 a share against $4 at present.

Extent of Recovery And Next Movement

Market commentators generally advise a more cautionary attitude toward stocks because of the amazing extent of the recent recovery. One said that since demand has been largely speculative rather than of an investment nature, profit taking is expected [illegible]. This authority [illegible] that the [illegible] demand for stocks may be [illegible] recovery in equity earning power [illegible] until such a [illegible] hysterical enthusiasm [illegible] avoided.

American Telephone Shorts Squeezed

Bears in American Telephone suffered a terrific beating in last week's sudden and vicious advance. The stock, as frequently remarked here, has been a favorite short sale by many "teddy bears"—small traders seeking to make small profits on trading turns. It also harbored sizable short accounts. At least one of the biggest bear interests in Telephone has refused to cover on the recent advance, and it is known that the attitude of this group remains unchanged. This opinion will be held regardless of the company's action on dividends due tomorrow.

American Can's Cash Declined

Beyond disclosure of an eleven-cents-per-share surplus above dividends, the American Can 1931 report's most interesting feature is the large decrease in cash. The company finished 1931 with cash of $6,3[illegible] against $16,[illegible] a year earlier. Only offsetting item, according to the condensed balance sheet, was a reduction in accounts and bills payable of $2,423,000, bringing them down to $4,76[illegible].

General Motors Short Account

Bears in General Motors seem cockiest of those in any active stock. They have the satisfaction at least of not being required to pay a premium for borrowing their stock, such as is being charged in various other issues.

Steel as Chief Bull Leader

Surprising as it may appear on the surface, Steel common has been selected as the leader of the further drive against the bears. The stock admittedly has few bull points at the moment with business dull and the dividend in danger. But this is considered secondary to the fact that the issue has been liberally sold short by professionals anxious to participate in any continuance of market decline.

Allis-Chalmers' 1931 Showing

Banking interests identified with Allis-Chalmers contend that the ability of the company to conduct operations on a profitable basis in 1931—a year of sharply restricted farm income and subnormal industrial activity—reflected the good position of the company in the machinery, electrical equipment and farm implement fields. The preliminary figures for 1931 recorded a net profit of [illegible] cents a share on the 1,242,[illegible] shares of common stock in the hands of the public at the end of the year. Unfilled orders on December 31 were $7,[illegible] against $[illegible] on September 30 [illegible]. Net current [illegible] at the end of the year totaled $[illegible].

American Can's 1931 Earnings

American Can Co.'s earnings for 1931 did not quite come up to the anticipations in the Street. Last August interests in the company were confident that the results would be approximately $6 a common share, but there was a falling off in volume and profits in the last six months, so that the revenues for the year totaled $15,3[illegible], which, after preferred dividends, [illegible] a common share. The [illegible] paid in dividends [illegible] $27 [illegible] to surplus. In the previous year earnings were equal to $8.08 a common share. Features of the report included a reduction of $800,000 in deduction for federal taxes to $2,[illegible] and a decrease of nearly $10,000,000 in cash, which amounted to $6,309,522 at the end of last year.

Freight Loadings Estimates Given

Estimates are that freight-car loadings to be published tomorrow morning will show an increase of approximately 12,000 to 15,000 cars over the total of 561,137 cars reported for the week ended January [illegible]. A reversal in the trend of freight movement would be an important factor in the stock market because it is pointed out that any important improvement in general business conditions would be reflected accurately in the freight moved over the carriers. The Ford resumption may become an influence in loadings later on.

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Whitney & Elwell—We have come through the severest part of the winter without the serious results feared from unemployment. Labor troubles have been few and far between. Progress has been made in regard to municipal difficulties. The banking situation is being much improved. The year 1932 will be one of further readjustment and accomplishment, laying a firm basis for later prosperity.

Shield & Co.—News of the debate on the new reserve act should prove the dominating market influence. If it indicates early passage and continues to encourage inflationary ideas, as seems likely, sufficient covering and some new buying should be influenced to effect further rally but there is no reason for regarding the market as anything but a trading affair.

Hornblower & Weeks—We look for further irregularity during the early trading in an attempt to resume the advance later in the day.

Edward B. Smith & Co.—The tape action yesterday suggested higher prices and on this basis we recommended the purchase of active stocks for trading purposes. We would suggest that these positions be maintained until the market by its own action indicates its inability to progress further.

Shattuck Report to Show a Gain

New York, Feb. 16—Frank G. Shattuck Co. in 1931 made a relatively good showing, covering its annual $1 dividend by a good margin, notwithstanding the generally unsatisfactory conditions in candy and restaurant fields. Net profit approximated $1,700,000, equal to between $1.30 and $1.35 a share on the outstanding 1,290,000 shares. This compares with $2,486,237 or $1.92 a share in 1930.

Annual report for 1931 scheduled to be published soon will show an improvement in the company's already strong financial condition.

Hormel Has Profit in First Quarter

Operations of George A. Hormel & Co. during the first three months of the current fiscal year were conducted at a profit, Jay C. Hormel, president, stated in a letter to stockholders accompanying the quarterly dividend checks.

Home Owner Payments for Year Increase

Minneapolis, Feb. 16—Home owners' payments to Investors Syndicate on first mortgage residence loans totalled $5,420,374.81 during 1931, according to a statement issued today by E. E. Crabb, vice-president of the company.

This exceeded by $264,329.73 the collections for the year 1929 which were $5,156,045.08. It was slightly less than 1930 when a larger number of complete liquidations by borrowers increased total collections to $5,638,284.71.

"The remarkable record of collections on these loans, which are on the monthly pay-off plan, is a demonstration of the depression-proof security of carefully selected homes as an investment," said Mr. Crabb. "It suggests that home owners as a class are thriftier, and are less likely to lose their jobs during periods of unemployment."

As of January 31 Investors Syndicate had outstanding first mortgages and first deeds of trust totaling $34,055,675.92 on 11,880 homes in 26 cities of United States and Canada. Average ratio of loans outstanding to appraised value of property was 45 per cent.

Total loans funded during 1931 were $6,927,290.66, the report showed; this compared with $7,315,788.69 in loans funded during 1930.

STOCKS MIXED ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

Stock prices were mixed in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange with changes limited to a narrow range. Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred was strong, advancing over a point to 66½.

American Telephone sold down nearly 2 points but rallied later in the session to show but a fractional loss from Monday's close. Atchison, New Haven and Pennsylvania were at slightly lower levels.

Edison Electric dropped over a point to 188 and General Electric showed a loss of a minor fraction at 21. United Fruit dipped a major fraction to 25⅞.

Gains of minor proportions were shown for First National Stores, Gillette, Mohawk and United Shoe.

Beacon Participations, Inc., reports for year ended Dec. 31, 1931, net profit of $33,444 after all charges and loss on sale of securities of $25,407. This compares with loss in 1930 of $64,776, including loss on securities sold of $135,668.

Balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1931, shows total assets of $1,598,772. Investments at a cost of $988,298 had market value of $261,606.

During the December quarter $20,000 General Theaters Equipment 6s of 1940 were sold.

Wheat Has a Rally After Early Sag

Chicago, Feb. 16 (AP)—Downturns of grain values took place early today, duplicating action of securities at New York and wheat quotations at Liverpool. A pause in European import buying of wheat was noted.

Opening ¼-¾ off, wheat afterward rallied. Corn started at ⅛ decline to a shade advance and subsequently kept near the initial range.

Dividends

New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. declared regular quarterly dividend of $2, payable March 31 to stock of record March 10.

—SPECTATOR— Says:

The temporary halt to the stock market advance was well received by the speculative community, since it was fully realized that the market upturn might very well burn itself out in rapid order unless kept under control.

Bear Market End

The point about which there is considerable difference of opinion in financial circles at the moment is whether or not events of the past week warrant the assumption that the bear market is at an end.

One of the better known of the speculative market services has very definitely voiced the opinion that, just as the increase of the Federal Reserve rediscount rate to a 6 per cent basis in 1929 marked the end of the bull market, so the recent proposal to broaden the base of eligibility for paper discountable by the Federal Reserve will mark the definite termination of the 1929-1932 bear market.

Reverse Attitude

In view of this development, this quarter is of the belief that the present situation calls for a prompt reversal of bearish attitude, and advises the immediate retirement of all short commitments. It concludes with the statement that from this point on, operations in the stock market should be confined entirely to the constructive side.

On the other hand, conservative sources stress the opinion that the present upturn should be given a chance to prove itself before too great dependence is placed on its durability. Adherents to this point of view make mention of the fact that sustained market advances are usually preceded by periods of deliberate accumulation by important interests. It is declared doubtful that an exception will be made in this instance.

American Mutual Pays Dividend

With the reduction or discontinuance of dividends by many companies, the announcement by the American Mutual Liability Insurance Company of its 522nd consecutive dividend of 20 per cent or more has aroused considerable interest. This record of dividends for nearly half a century without interruption is unequalled by any other mutual casualty insurance company or by few companies in any line of business.

Zonite Products Net Income $953,177

Preliminary report of Zonite Products Company for the year 1931 shows a net income of $953,177 after expenses, taxes, etc., equal to $1.13 a share on 815,550 shares of common, as against $750,608, or 89 cents a share in 1930.

STOCKS LOWER WITH SELLING DECREASED

New York, Feb. 16—Important shares were moderately lower in today's forenoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange, with selling decreased.

Fractional net changes were the general rule. Auburn Auto and Peoples Gas moved off 3 points. U. S. Steel reduced a small loss as trading progressed.

OFFERINGS ARE SMALL

Offerings were notably small. Point or more setbacks showed in the second period for American Telephone, Macy, Curtiss, McCall, New York Central, "Mop" preferred and the Liggett & Myers issues.

In the commodities markets the action of securities was mainly reflected, with grains and cotton showing an easy tone for a time. The bond market was mixed.

The New Work Curb Exchange announced today that the short position in all securities as of Feb. 1 totaled 73,828 shares, compared with 80,796 shares as of January 15.

It is understood the Reliance International Corporation has acquired the unissued common stock of the Reliance Management Corporation with the view t othe latter's absorption. Reliance Management Co.'s contract to provide research, statistical and accounting facilities to Reliance International will be terminated Sept. 1, 1932, it is said.

Recent plans of the American International Co. to absorb Reliance IInternational failed to materialize because of the former's failure to obtain the required stock.

FOR PUBLIC ECONOMY

Declaring capital cost and carrying charges of government throughout the entire country have swollen during recent years of prosperity until they are now a heavy burden on the cost of doing any business, President Boardman of New York Produce Exchange, with approval of board of managers, has addressed an appeal to members asking that they actively concern themselves with economy in public dministration.

Weekly Federal Reserve board report again showed the unmistakable deflationary trend which the Glass-Steagall bill is designed to correct. Loans of member banks declined another $114,000,000 during the week. Investments were down $80,000,000. Borrowings from the Federal Reserve Bank contracted $20,000,000.

Washington advices that Congress was giving full speed ahead to the bill were favorably received in banking circles, where it was contended that the psychological effect of quick passage of the legislation would be good.

Bankers expressed the view privately that the recent upturn in bond and stock prices had already achieved some change in sentiment, and they reasoned that a firmer price would encourage Americans to spend a little more freely. This in turn, it was said, should go a long way toward inducing hoarders to bring their currency into the open.

Advance in copper export prices to 6⅝ cents a pound, representing a gain of ¼ cent, offset the effect of further foreign selling of metal securities. The copper trade reported comparatively few selling orders had actually been placed at the lower quotation, consisting mainly of small stocks which customs smelters wished to dispose of.

CURB MARKET SUPPORTED

New York, Feb. 16—Curb stocks encountered a good grade of support in the first half of today's session, and while price declines were preponderant, the market as a whole maintained a generally steady undertone.

The utility group showed a disposition to ease off somewhat, with American Gas & Electric the only issue able to record any headway in early dealings.

Commonwealth Edison with a decline of a point to 109, was the heaviest loser, but in such active favorites as Electric Bond and Share, American Superpower, Middle West Utilities and United Light and Power, declines were of insignificant proportions.

Cities Service was under scattered selling presure, dipping ⅛ to 5⅞. Oils were fractionally lower, with Gulf off ¼ and Standard of Indiana down ¼.

Specialties weer mixed, with Great Atlantic & Pacific Stores an early feature with a two-point upturn. Aluminum was ½ point higher, while New York Steam turned reactionary, falling to 49, for a loss of 1¾ points.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

WOULD COVER REGULAR

G. L., Allston—Corn Products has been suggestd as a good purchase. What is your opinion of it?

Ans.—Dividends, with extras, have been maintained on Corn Products common from 1920. The current $3 basis has been in force from July, 1929. During 1931 extras totaling $1 were distributed. Operations for nine months ended Sept. 30, 1931, resulted in net income equivalent to $2.47 a share. Unofficial estimate for full year is $3.50 a share. This would cover the regular rate with a margin to spare, but would not leave much for extras. Earnings in 1930 were $4.82 a share.

A SPECULATION

K. E., Back Bay—I have 20 shares Electric Bond & Share way above current prices. Do you think I can ever recover the money?

Ans.—No one can know future market prices. Electric Bond & Share has not attained investment rating. Dividends are not paid in cash, but in stock at annual rate of 6 per cent. Net income for 12 months ended Oct. 31, 1931, equalled $1.46 a share, against $2.54 in similar preceding period.

State-Owned Rails Can't Pay Capital

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 16 (AP)—Sir Joseph Flavelle, member of the Royal Commission on Transportation, asserted that from 1918 to 1931 the government operated Canadian National Railways. "Have never earned enough money to pay for coal, oil and wages." "We've never paid one cent to capital." He continued, in debating public ownership with A. R. Mosher, spokesman for the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees.

Mosher, who advocated government ownership of the railways, contended the condition outlined by Sir Joseph was a result of the government having taken over roads which had been bankrupt by private ownership.

L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson Railway and also a commissioner, voiced approval of Sir Joseph's stand against government ownership. Loree asserted that between 1830 and 1930 the return to capital on railway investment had increased only about 75 per cent, while the return to labor had risen about 1200 per cent.

Copper Exporters Advance Red Metal

New York, Feb. 16 (AP)—Encouraged by the increased buying of foreign consumers, Copper Exporters Inc., today increased its price another ¼ cent to a basis of 6⅝ cents.

This is one-half cent a pound above the recent low quotation and only ⅛ cent below the so-called regular price in effect before the custom smelters availed themselves of clause in the foreign selling agreement, permitting the lowering of the price whn metal accumulated in their hands.

Firm Is in Larger Quarters

Announcement has been made by Jackson & Curtis of the removal of their Back Bay branch office from the Ritz-Carlton Hotel to 124 Newbury st. This office is three times larger than the previous one.

Stone & Webster Change

Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., the investment securities subsidiary of Stone & Webster, Inc., has filed with the Secretary of State at Albany, N. Y., a ceritficate providing for the reduction of its capital from $4,000,000 to $1,350,000.

$60,000,000 in Treasury Bills

U. S. Treasury is writing bids on $60,000,000 91-day Treasury bills to be sold to the highest bidder on discount basis. Tenders will be received to February 19 at 2 p. m. Bills will be dated February 24 and mature May 25. Proceeds will be used in retiring $66,082,000 bills maturing February 24.

Causes of Market's Rise Outlined by Cousins

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, Feb. 16 — No great surprise need be felt over the sensational flare-up in the stock market which in the last two sessions of last week recovered virtually all the ground lost since the middle of January.

The causes of the rise were as follows:

1. The trapping of the shorts, in one of the most skillfully executed bullish "drives" of the whole bear-market period.

2. The "surprise element" in the administration's inflation program, which automatically forces up commodity and security values and cuts off the purchasing power of the dollar.

3. An undercurrent of returning public confidence in the automobile, steel and other basic business lines, and the feeling that it is "now or never" in the revival of activity in wholesale and retail trade.

* * *

The most obvious development in the stock market since the middle of January has been the increase in reckless short selling of the active industrial and railroad shares by a coterie of uninformed speculators to whom the spectacle of a decline of a point or two means that the whole bottom was about to drop out of everything.

The speculators who were willing to pay from $75 to $125 a week for the loan of 100 shares of United States Steel to cover their short committments were facing heavy losses when big steel rallied back to 40 and mighty big ones when the old bellwether rushed up to 49.

Bankers recognized in the bill to liberalize the rediscount facilities of the reserve banks the very weapon they needed to cope with present-day conditions in credit and finance. It simply means the utilizing of perfectly good equities which heretofore have been barred to the credit-manufacturing mechanism of the reserve system.

Those who have hastily formed the conclusion that the government's plan to widen the Reserve Bank rediscount base will end in a wild spree of inflation will have reason to change their views within a comparatively short time.

* * *

The proposal to "loosen up" and to render more liquid a large volume of perfectly sound, though "slow" and at present ineligible paper is not revolutionary in central banking, and certainly there should be no danger in substituting for a billion dollars of hoarded cash the same volume of new currency based on government bonds and backed up partly by gold.

The Washington legislators appreciate the fact that money hoarded in any manner is absolutely out of the picture as long as it is in hiding. However, against this money reserves must be kept and all other formalities duly carried out, just as though it were "in circulation" in the channels of legitimate trade.

As soon as a few hundred millions of the hoarded cash shows its nose above the surface, in the form of buying of commodities or through investment in bonds, the equivalent in new currency can be automatically withdrawn from circulation.

* * *

In two days the average of 50 industrial stocks in the Standard Statistics list moved up 10 points, the rails six points and the utilities 14 points. On Wednesday afternoon the average of 90 representative stocks fell a shade under the low level of January 5, and was thus at the low point of the bear markeet. Two days of sensational upswing completely reversed the picture.

The sky-rocketing of an old standby like Union Pacific for a distance of 32 points in three trading sessions is an event not often chronicled, even in the spectacular markets we have had since 1928.

There is no question but that a large portion of the short interest has been eliminated in the advance and for that reason the market is again subject to a critical test.

Utility Corp. Shows Profit for the Year

Utility & Industrial Corp. for the year 1931 reports a net profit of $1,413,963 after expenses, interest, taxes and loss on sale of securities, as against $1,585,445 in 1930. Figures are preliminary and subject to final audit.

East Texas Output Decreases in Week

New York, Feb. 16—With the reduction in per well allowable output to 75 barrels from 00, daily production in the East Texas oil field last week averaged 327,21 barrels daily, or 21,959 less than preceding week's average. Crude oil movement to market for the week totaled 2,229,747 barrels, a decline of 269,883 barrels.

A total of 88 new producers was reported for the week, 19 more than in the week previous, and bringing the total completions to 4,094.

Liquefied Petroleum Gas Marketed Gains

An increase of nearly 10,100,000 gallons, representing a gain over 1930 sales of 58 per cent, brought the 1931 marketed production of liquefied petroleum gases to a total of 28,502,813 gallons, according to the United States Bureau of Mines, Department of Commerce. The 1931 increase exceeded that recorded for 1930, when marketed production was approximately 8,000,000 gallons higher than in the preceding year.

Toledo Edison Co. Income Declines

Toledo Edison Co. reports gross operating revenue of $10,072,232 for the 12 months ended Dec. 31, 1931, against $10,902,592 for the previous 12 months' period. Net operating revenue for 1931 amounted to $4,844,731, compared with $5,257,162 for 1930.

The balance sheet of the company shows total assets of $77,821,230 and a surplus of $14,154,977, as compared with $12,621,816 at the end of the previous year.

Curb "Short" Total Drops in January

New York, Feb. 16—Announcement was made by the New York Curb Exchange that the short position in all securities as of February 1, 1932, totaled 73,828 shares. This compares with a short interest totaling 80,796 shares as of January 5, 1932.

During the period covered in the compilation 2,362,824 shares were dealt in.

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Bella—
I am a great admirer of your daily thoughts and would be very pleased if you could favor me with an autographed photo of yourself.
Constant Reader.

Ans.—Why, you dear, sweet boy, Aunt Bella would be only too glad. But I find myself a little puzzled as to which one of many portrait studies to send you. I have some poses of myself which closely resemble Joan Crawford. While in others I look like Janet Gaynor, Constance Bennett, Alice White, Norma Shearer, Lupe Velez and Greta Garbo. How do your tastes run, kiddo?

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD
THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Now two sizes 60c—$1.25. (adv.)

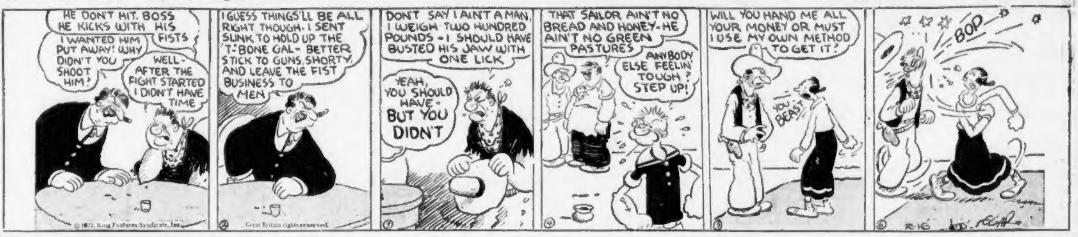
THIMBLE THEATRE, starring POPEYE — Now Showing—"The Weaker Sex"



HE DON'T HIT, BOSS HE KICKS WITH HIS FISTS
I WANTED HIM PUT AWAY! WHY DIDN'T YOU SHOOT HIM?
WELL- AFTER THE FIGHT STARTED I DIDN'T HAVE TIME
I GUESS THINGS'LL BE ALL RIGHT THOUGH. I SENT SUNK TO HOLD UP THE "T-BONE GAL" - BETTER STICK TO GUNS, SHORTY, AND LEAVE THE FIST BUSINESS TO MEN
DON'T SAY I AIN'T A MAN, I WEIGH TWO HUNDRED POUNDS - I SHOULD HAVE BUSTED HIS JAW WITH ONE LICK
YEAH, YOU SHOULD HAVE - BUT YOU DIDN'T
THAT SAILOR AIN'T NO BREAD AND HONEY - HE AIN'T NO GREEN PASTURES
ANYBODY ELSE FEELIN' TOUGH? STEP UP!
WILL YOU HAND ME ALL YOUR MONEY OR MUST I USE MY OWN METHOD TO GET IT?

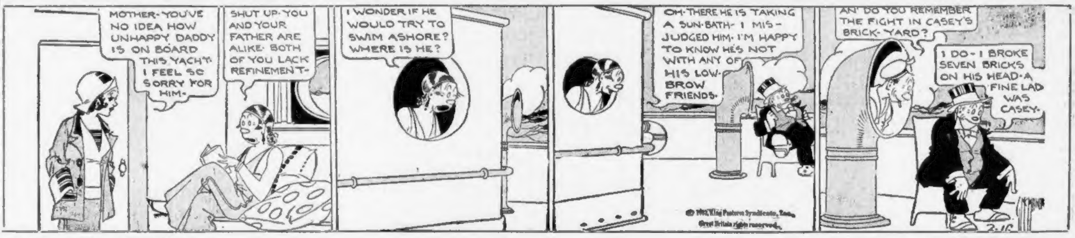
BRINGING UP FATHER — A Fine Lad Was Casey!



MOTHER - YOU'VE NO IDEA HOW UNHAPPY DADDY IS ON BOARD THIS YACHT. I FEEL SO SORRY FOR HIM.
SHUT UP - YOU AND YOUR FATHER ARE ALIKE - BOTH OF YOU LACK REFINEMENT - I WONDER IF HE WOULD TRY TO SWIM ASHORE? WHERE IS HE?
OH - THERE HE IS TAKING A SUN-BATH - I MISJUDGED HIM - I'M HAPPY TO KNOW HE'S NOT WITH ANY OF HIS LOW-BROW FRIENDS.
AN' DO YOU REMEMBER THE FIGHT IN CASEY'S BRICK-YARD?
I DO - I BROKE SEVEN BRICKS ON HIS HEAD - A FINE LAD WAS CASEY.

RADIO AUDIENCE KEEN

Letters Indicate Listeners' Likes

Human Traits Win Public Acclaim

By N. F. T.

Talking to or singing for the vast radio audience is fast becoming, if it has not always been, a matter of catering to the finest sensibilities of loudspeaker patrons. Microphone artists are liked for an ability to make friends. They succeed as broadcasting attractions according to voice personality.

Such traits count as much as talent itself. Perhaps it may sound strange, yet Kate Smith, Morton Downey or Tony Wons would outshine Geraldine Farrar, John McCormack and John Barrymore in many parlors.

• • •

VETERANS' FAVORITE

That situation, judging from letters being written to this diligent desk, has come about because well known personalities have developed a knack of talking and singing to people as well as for them. Considered today's "Good Samaritan," for example. Elsie Janis is nominated by a reader who likes the way Elsie "carries on" the work she became famous for during the World War.

• • •

Elsie Janis Cheers World War Veterans

Peppy, personality girl nominated as a "Good Samaritan of the Air" By George N. Savard of Stoneham, whose letter says:

Elsie Janis

"After 14 years she tries to make veterans forget their sorrows, just as she did during the never-to-be-forgotten world conflict."

Do you know of a human act performed by any radio broadcaster? Send the Boston American his or her name. If that person is nominated, two tickets for Loew's State or Orpheum Theater will be mailed to you at once.

Yesterday marked an important change in the Clara, Lu and Em feature through WBZ. These three gossipy girls, airing their chatter at 9:45 p. m. heretofore, take to the waves henceforth in the morning, between 10:15 and 10:30.

Linus (WNAC) Travers has been working up an interview with Ann Pennington, the bit originating in night club atmosphere of the Cocoanut Grove tonight at 6:45.. Ann will "Ann Sir" questions propounded by Linus while both are seated at a table. Linus was also recently overheard putting in some verbal promotion regarding Ranny Weeks, no doubt having said colorful young maestro in mind for regular orchestra and floor show duty at the Piedmount st. rendezvous. There's a likelihood.

Those rough, often breathtaking he-man "Death Valley" programs are written and directed by a very quiet, unassuming GIRL—imagine! Ruth Cornwall is the fair, reticent dramatist who arranges woolly western radio offerings based on observations made among old timers while traveling through California and Nevada not many years back.

LOCAL LATHER

With commercial mindedness attending broadcasts, it seems like studio Salons might glimpse opportunity in the growing visitation of people who turn up at sound sanctums to "see" a program presented . . . Boss men might even consider selling admission tickets, whereupon the "Radio Box Office" would become a reality instead of just something to talk about . . . Francis P. (Tip) O'Neill leads Police Commissioner Hultman to the "mike" (WNAC) tomorrow night, marking our Hub law enforcement boss' second talking turn on the air with Tip . . . Some subscribers don't care for the way Carleton (WEEI) Dickerman says "vodeville," but his pronunciation is correct, and "vawdeevil" is all wrong . . . Mrs. Smith of East Walpole may be pleased to learn Ray Perkins and George Jessel are two different chaps . . . Someone apparently gave this lady listener an idea they were one and the same.

On the Air

Radio artists are complaining of the depression. In fact, many of them feel the lack of lucre so badly they're returning to their old trades of loafing, vice-presidenting and ditch and gold digging.

To stimulate and help keep together the profession, here are suggestive means for the artists to go out and "get the long green."

Instead of fan letters to the talent, an'ncers could ask list'rs to send in grapefruit, big squash, caviar, pate fois de gras, spinach, onions and filet mignon. That would cover their food problem.

Rather than steal songs and styles from their colleagues, the alleged talent might find it less involving and more profitable to rob banks.

Crooners—and when you say crooners you mean the best (or is it the worst?) part of the folks in radio—could increase their waning incomes by getting paid for endorsements. Of this sort, y'know: "I became a crooner by sniffing the wrong type snuff. Now I inhale 'Sneezum' and my throat is slowly but successfully returning to normalcy."

Sound effects in radio dramas are very expensive. Some sopranos could save the stations lots and make plenty themselves by subbing for the sound effects. No one can impersonate a baby howl, a train whistle or a fire engine siren better than a soprano.

However, if the artists don't care for these suggestions let 'em go back to their old professions and work for a living.

RUDY VALLEE will not be heard on his p'grams of Feb. 25 and March 3. Don't be scared; he's only on vacation and will be back the 10th. Ray Perkins will carry on in his customary faultless fashion. Ray, by the way, is quite a modest chap who can't be convinced he's a topnotch b'dcaster. But 50 million list'rs can't be wrong . . . The KUKU p'gram will be shifting to an eve. spot soon . . . B'dcasters will meet Al Jolson's $ demands so watch for his series.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Eve. American love and marriage advisor, starts a 4-a-wk. series o'er WBZ at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow... Bob Pierce has signed with WNAC for a yr...WEEI'S hostess, Doris Estey will forsake hostessing for marriage some time in May... Nancy (WNAC) Howe's voice sounds better than ever, result of eliminating smoking two packs a day...A Chicago spy writes in to say when you sign to work for Paul Whiteman, the contract is a regular book. Seems Paul is careful now that he's made and lost Bing Crosby, the Rhythm Boys, Jane Froman, the King's Jesters and a score more...And a wrist slap for the local station that withholds its artists' fan mail for fear they'll swell up and howl for more money.

Congress Sees Light of Sales Tax Facts

Good news for the whole country is the decision of the Congress to resort to a general manufactures sales tax to assist the Government in balancing the budget by 1933.

The fact that this announcement to the House by Congressman Crisp, of Georgia, acting Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, was greeted by loud cheers seems to show that under the able leadership of Speaker Garner the popular branch of Congress is developing the courage to face the facts and the wisdom to legislate in the light of the facts.

All that Judge Crisp says in support of the proposed general manufactures sales tax corroborates the arguments of the Hearst newspapers in favor of profiting by the experience of Canada and other countries that have put this system to the test.

In addition to Canada, approximately thirty other countries have found a general tax of this nature acceptable to the public, easy to administer and productive of large revenues when well administered—revenues not subject to extreme fluctuation.

This general sales tax is an important part of the tax system of the chief European countries except Great Britain.

Nine States of the Union and two territories impose a sales tax in some form or other.

And no less eminent an authority on taxation than Doctor Thomas S. Adams, of Yale University, reports to Congress that the heads of the tax system of the important nations of the world "all think that a sales tax is practical."

Experience proves that a sales tax is not only practical but that it is also equitable, and as nearly painless as any tax can be.

In turning to the sales tax Congress is following the dictates of common sense and profiting by the experience of Canada and other progressive countries that are now raising revenue by this easiest, most economical and least burdensome method of taxation.

P. O. Men Ask Work

The postal employes of Boston have made a dignified request that work be supplied the substitute clerks. With the Christmas-New Year rush subsided, they find their hours of employment reduced and their income diminished. They want neither a dole nor public charity. They ask only for the chance to earn a living. The American workman is not a beggar. If he has been forced into the charity class it has been by stupid politicians and harsh employers who have no regard for his innate dignity. He will rebuke these politicians when the next elections come.

Auto Accidents Down

It is refreshing to read at last that automobile accidents and fatalities have begun to show a downward trend. There were fewer deaths last week than in any corresponding period in many years. The serious storm, with highways filled with ice and slush, seems to have brought a spirit of caution to the autoists. If they were cautious yesterday, they can be cautious today and tomorrow. Let this self-restraint continue. There is not a human life in Massachusetts too insignificant to be sacrificed to wanton recklessness. Now that the record has begun to improve, keep it bright.

Children Love Him

Rt. Rev. Mgr. John W. McMahon, pastor of St. Mary's Church, observed his 85th birthday in Charlestown, the community in which he was born. The children of the school sent him a tribute of their affection, and he spent most of the day as usual ministering to the poor and afflicted among his parishioners. Any man who receives the admiration of children and the veneration and respect of the humble can count himself fortunate indeed.

By Edgar A. Guest
Just Folks

The Two Spirits

In each of us two souls there are,
And one is weak and one is strong,
And day by day along life's way
All men are torn 'twixt right and wrong;
Temptation is a subtle thing.
With varying lures it leads us on,
All roads it fares to set its snares,
But right must travel only one.

Some sneer at those to drink a prey,
Yet they themselves are sore beset.
The bravest men find moments when
Their finer instincts they forget.
For, tempted by the joy they crave
Of selfish gain or selfish pride,
They, too, will race to what is base
And push the struggling right aside.

For money some do shameful things
Within the precincts of the law.
With no regard for bargains hard,
They'll fight for gain with tooth and claw.
Not all the failures to be fine
Are caused by open scarlet sin,
Men bitter grow, their power to show,
And sometimes break their word to win.

The right must struggle 'gainst the odds,
Temptation strikes with subtle skill,
And if the conscience merely nods,
Man's baser nature works its will.
In each of us two spirits dwell
And one is dark and one is fair,
And man must fight for what is right,
Or wrong will catch him unaware.

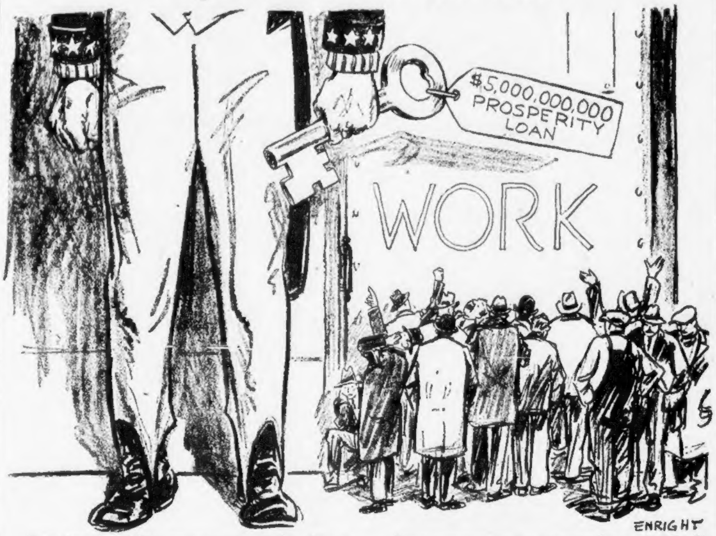
Why Not Unlock the Door?



More than eight million unemployed, suffering, through no fault of their own in a Land of Plenty, daily cry to the Head Servants at Washington for WORK and they are handed WORDS.

After three years of futile waiting for Washington to act, the jobless feel keenly the pinch of poverty, but their pleas, NOT FOR A DOLE, NOT FOR CHARITY, BUT FOR THE RIGHT TO WORK, procure for them only sonorous phrases, and no matter how sonorous, phrases do not appease the pangs of hunger.

Europe's woes worry the Administration greatly; the ills of the folks at home concern it not.

A $5,000,000,000 Prosperity Loan to finance a gigantic scheme of essential public works is the key that would unlock the barrier now standing between WILLING WORKERS and WORK. Create jobs for the jobless and the buying power of the masses would be increased, business would steadily improve, all classes would benefit and the cycle would start upward.

Why cannot this Administration for once be American minded and for America?

New York Day by Day -:- By O. O. McIntyre

River Troupers

NEW YORK, Feb. 16—John Golden added spice to the season's theatrical dish by turning his cozy playhouse over to that group of valiant show boat troupers from the mud flats. For those from the tall grass, brought up on show boat fare, it was a memorable first night, a gallant sortie.

The only thing lacking was a calliope. For 40 years, Billy Bryant and his father, Sam, now 76, paddled up and down the Ohio. In that time they wore out three show boats. Billy married during his wanderings and his wife, Josephine, and daughter, Betty, 7, are in the company.

Not one ever appeared in New York before. Indeed, save for a recent stay in Cincinnati and Chicago, their world has been a pleasant drifting from one jay hamlet to the next, season after season. They wouldn't even hesitate at cities for mail.

Had they realized they were to face such a distinguished first night audience, Billy Bryant, in a charmingly naive curtain speech, confessed they would have fled. He warned after the first act the performance would get worse and worse. And added: "You better go now."

Yet his speech had a quality of disarming frankness that completely captivated the stiff shirts and ermine coats. For instance: "If you think this is rotten, you should see our Hamlet." He confessed they were all "hams," scared stiff and praying not to exit out of town astraddle a rail.

But Broadway is so used to boasting thespians, the engaging about face filled the theater with cheers. Scenery and costumes were tawdry, the lines mawkish, but there was about them a refreshing sincerity—a clean breath of the forgotten marshlands whence they came.

Among those contributing to the applause were the Charles Dana Gibsons, the Roy Howards, Rube Goldbergs, Dudley Field Malones, Buff and Steve Brody, Fannie Hurst, Gene Tunney, the Bruce Bartons, Irvin Cobb, James Montgomery Flagg and the Gene Bucks. Certainly a galaxy to inspire even a Barrymore.

* * *

The Bryants are rooted in the pioneer soil of the medicine show. While Billy's father mixed corn salve and ballyhooed electric belts, the son twanged the banjo on the portable platform and so in a prairie schooner they made "pitches" through Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas. Sam, the elder Bryant, built his first show boat 40 years ago at Pt. Pleasant, W. Va., four miles from my boyhood home, Gallipolis, O., on the opposite side of the Ohio. For 30 years he moored at Gallipolis levee each summer and under a flaring banjo torch herded timid yaps into the show with a deft and dulcet tallyho.

They are humble folks—these river troubadours. For 25 years the present company has bivouacked along the bayous without change of personnel. Temperamental tantrums peculiar to the footlights are unknown. A leading man may play the tuba in the overture and hawk postcards as the audience departs.

A touch of their innocent bravado was expressed at the premiere. After the first act, the celebrity audience was asked to the stage to meet the performers and partake of free near beer and pretzels at the bar of the Sickle and Sheaf Inn—the play was "Ten Nights in a Barroom." Not a notable hesitated. The most experienced masters of ceremony could not turn such a trick. They touched glasses with Simon Slade, the landlord; Mehitable Cartright, who never had a beau; Willie Hammond, the Judge's son; Joe Morgan, the drunkard, and Mary Morgan, the drunkard's daughter—all in costume. Shyly, the forks-of-the-creek performers found the gathering of aristocratic New Yorkers fitting that bosomy adjective of the forlorn hollows—"folksy." The river folk brought to sophisticates with compelling clearness that certain, ineffable beauty of simplicity.

I experienced especial tingling over Vic Faust's olio rendition of "Liberty Bell March" on Swiss hand bells and a raffish nightingale singing "Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage." And when Paul Robinson played "Over the Waves" on the harmonica with variations, I understood why the puckish Roy Howard touched my shoulder and whispered: "I'd rather do that than try to run a flock of newspapers." Most of us felt that way.

Speaking of poor shows, Hal Skelly tells of one so lousy they would not accept it at Cain's warehouse until they rewrote the third act.

'The Common People, the Vulgar, the Mob'

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for The Boston Evening American.

THERE ARE PROBABLY from twenty to twenty-five million men, women and children in America who are in dire distress with millions of them threatened with starvation. Private charity has collapsed—why deceive ourselves?

After the President's emergency drive for contributions, with much beating of the drums, the fact remains that but 30 per cent of all the money that has been used to prevent starvation has come from the pockets of individuals. The 70 per cent has come from local treasuries—State, county, municipal.

Everyone knows that many, if not most, of the city governments have reached the end of their resources.

And conditions, as far as hungry, shivering, women and children are concerned, are worse today than ever.

With this in mind, we read the debate in the Senate between Senators Fess and Borah on the plan to give assistance to the hungry from the Federal Treasury. Perhaps it is just as well that these millions who are threatened with starvation will never read that discussion; just as well that they did not hear from Senator Fess the expression of the feeling of the National Administration. Never have we read anything so steeped in sophistry and so cruelly cold toward suffering.

When women were starving in Paris and crying for bread, Marie Antoinette asked why they did not eat cake; when the people of Ireland were starving in the famine of '48 the then Duke of York suggested that a nutritious food could be made of the dried leaves of the forest; and now Senator Fess has spoken for the Administration. A tragic trio.

It Is the Old, Old Story

Much was said against taking money from the Treasury to feed the hungry.

Nothing was said of the fact that money has been taken from the Treasury to feed the hungry of Europe.

But something was said of taking money from the Treasury to help the banks and the great corporations—something we have done.

Senator Fess and the Administration find their souls shaken at the thought of such an unusual proceeding as furnishing money from the Treasury to keep the bodies and souls of millions of women and children together, but both thought it wise, regardless of the unusual proceeding, to take money from the Treasury to take care of private business.

Borah said:

"The Government of the United States has no authority in the world to negotiate private loans for the benefit of private corporations; there is not the slightest authority for it. The Senator cannot find any authority for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation law except in the law of dictatorship or of Soviet Russia."

But because of the solemnity of the crisis, Borah does not object to these loans for the benefit of private corporations, while Fess and the Administration, anxious to "go red" for private corporations, are unwilling to do the unusual, which would be improper under ordinarily normal conditions, to prevent the starvation of the millions.

It is the old, old story: Some people think primarily in terms of money, and others in terms of humanity.

Borah's Answer to Senator Fess

It is just as well that the millions, who, through no fault of their own, are fighting against starvation, will not read the Fess - Administration speech Mr. Fess spoke of the function of our government as that of "preserving the liberty and keeping open the opportunity" of the people; and one would imagine that opportunity has been kept open when 8,000,000 breadwinners are denied their inalienable right to work. And then he added that "the Government is organized and conducted to protect individuals in their rights and not to support them"—as though they had been protected in their rights.

But Borah answered:

"Why did not the Senator say to the banks and corporations who were on the verge of failure: "Go back home; resuscitate your own frozen assets; take care of your own private business. . . . Therefore, you bankers and corporate interests, go back home and take care of your own business; this is a private affair; this is an individual affair."

The Spokesman of the White House

There were other features of the debate that are interesting. When Fess harped on that blessed word "dole," and was asked by Borah to explain why money to prevent starvation from a city treasury is not a dole and money from the national treasury to meet a national crisis is a dole—he had no answer.

No one has answered that question.

No one can.

And there was another thing that startled us. Senator Fess spoke of these millions of jobless men who want work, and the millions of their dependents as potential vagabonds, loafers, beggars; because he said that if they are given bread to preserve their lives, they will not want to work again but will become chronic beggars. That is as brutal as anything we have ever heard or read—and as false and slanderous.

And Senator Fess spoke as the Chairman of the Republican National Committee and spokesman of the White House.

* * *

"Populace"—What Does It Mean?

The debate was interesting to students of history and government in many ways. It revealed, in a few illuminating expressions from Senator Fess, why, under the ruling forces just now, a mockery is being made of the pretension that we have a democracy in America.

Thus, when there were murmurs of approval for Borah in the gallery, Fess contemptuously referred to the masses of the people as the "populace." Most illuminating word, coming from the spokesman of the Administration! It is a word often on the lips of the kings and tyrants in the old days; it was a favorite word with the American Federalists before the American people hurled them from power, and, in the election of Jefferson, according to Henry Cabot Lodge, "definitely determined that this should be a democratic republic."

"Populace"—what does it mean? What did Fess, speaking for the Administration, mean? It means, to quote Webster, "the common people, the vulgar, the multitude, the mob."

And then Fess and Borah disagreed on the relation of government to the people, and this is revealing, too. Fess took the position that the people are the servants of government, and Borah that government is the servant of the people. That is the difference between autocracy, or plutocracy, and democracy.

Up Against the Guns of Tragedy

No one has opposed the granting of help to banks, railroads and private corporations; not that we want to adopt such a grant as a policy, but because we are right up against the guns of tragedy.

No one would favor feeding citizens out of the Federal treasury as a policy, but millions of human beings are right up against the guns.

We do not haggle and grow argumentative over helping the banks and corporations; why haggle and split terms when children actually are starving?

We have taken care of money; why not some thought for men?
